SECRET COUNCIL MEMOS REVEAL INNER WORKINGS OF CITY HALL

By MICHAEL GARDNER

CARMEL CITY Administrator Doug Schmitz since his arrival in February of 1983 has habitually written secret "Friday letters" that are used as a forum to communicate private and public information to the city council.

A series of heavily-censored memos released to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook last week revealed that Schmitz passed information to the council about many issues that were to be, or had been, discussed by the council in public session.

However, none of the Friday memos at any time were released to the press or public, nor was the public made aware of their existence.

The memos include information on such controversial — and public — issues as Craig McFarland's seawall and Cottage Row projects, the paint color for La Playa and Piccadilly Park.

The letters also contain information related to such mundane topics as arrests by the horse patrolwoman, the number of patrons at the library on Sundays and real estate signs.

Schmitz at times even advised the council not to talk with this newspaper about certain issues, such as the controversy over the paint color for La Playa Hotel.

And large portions of the letters are deleted from the publicly-released copies because those paragraphs contained information about litigation and personnel matters, which can legally be excluded from public scrutiny.

The memos were a city hall secret until earlier this month when the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook was told of their existence by a source.

A reporter verbally contacted Schmitz and requested the opportunity to review the letters. Schmitz refused, and said he believed the memos were personal correspondences from himself to the council and therefore not public information.

This newspaper then contacted Joseph Francke, legal counsel for the California Newspaper Publishers Association.

Francke advised that the letters are public information under both the Ralph M. Brown Act and the Public Records Act. The central mandate of the records act states:

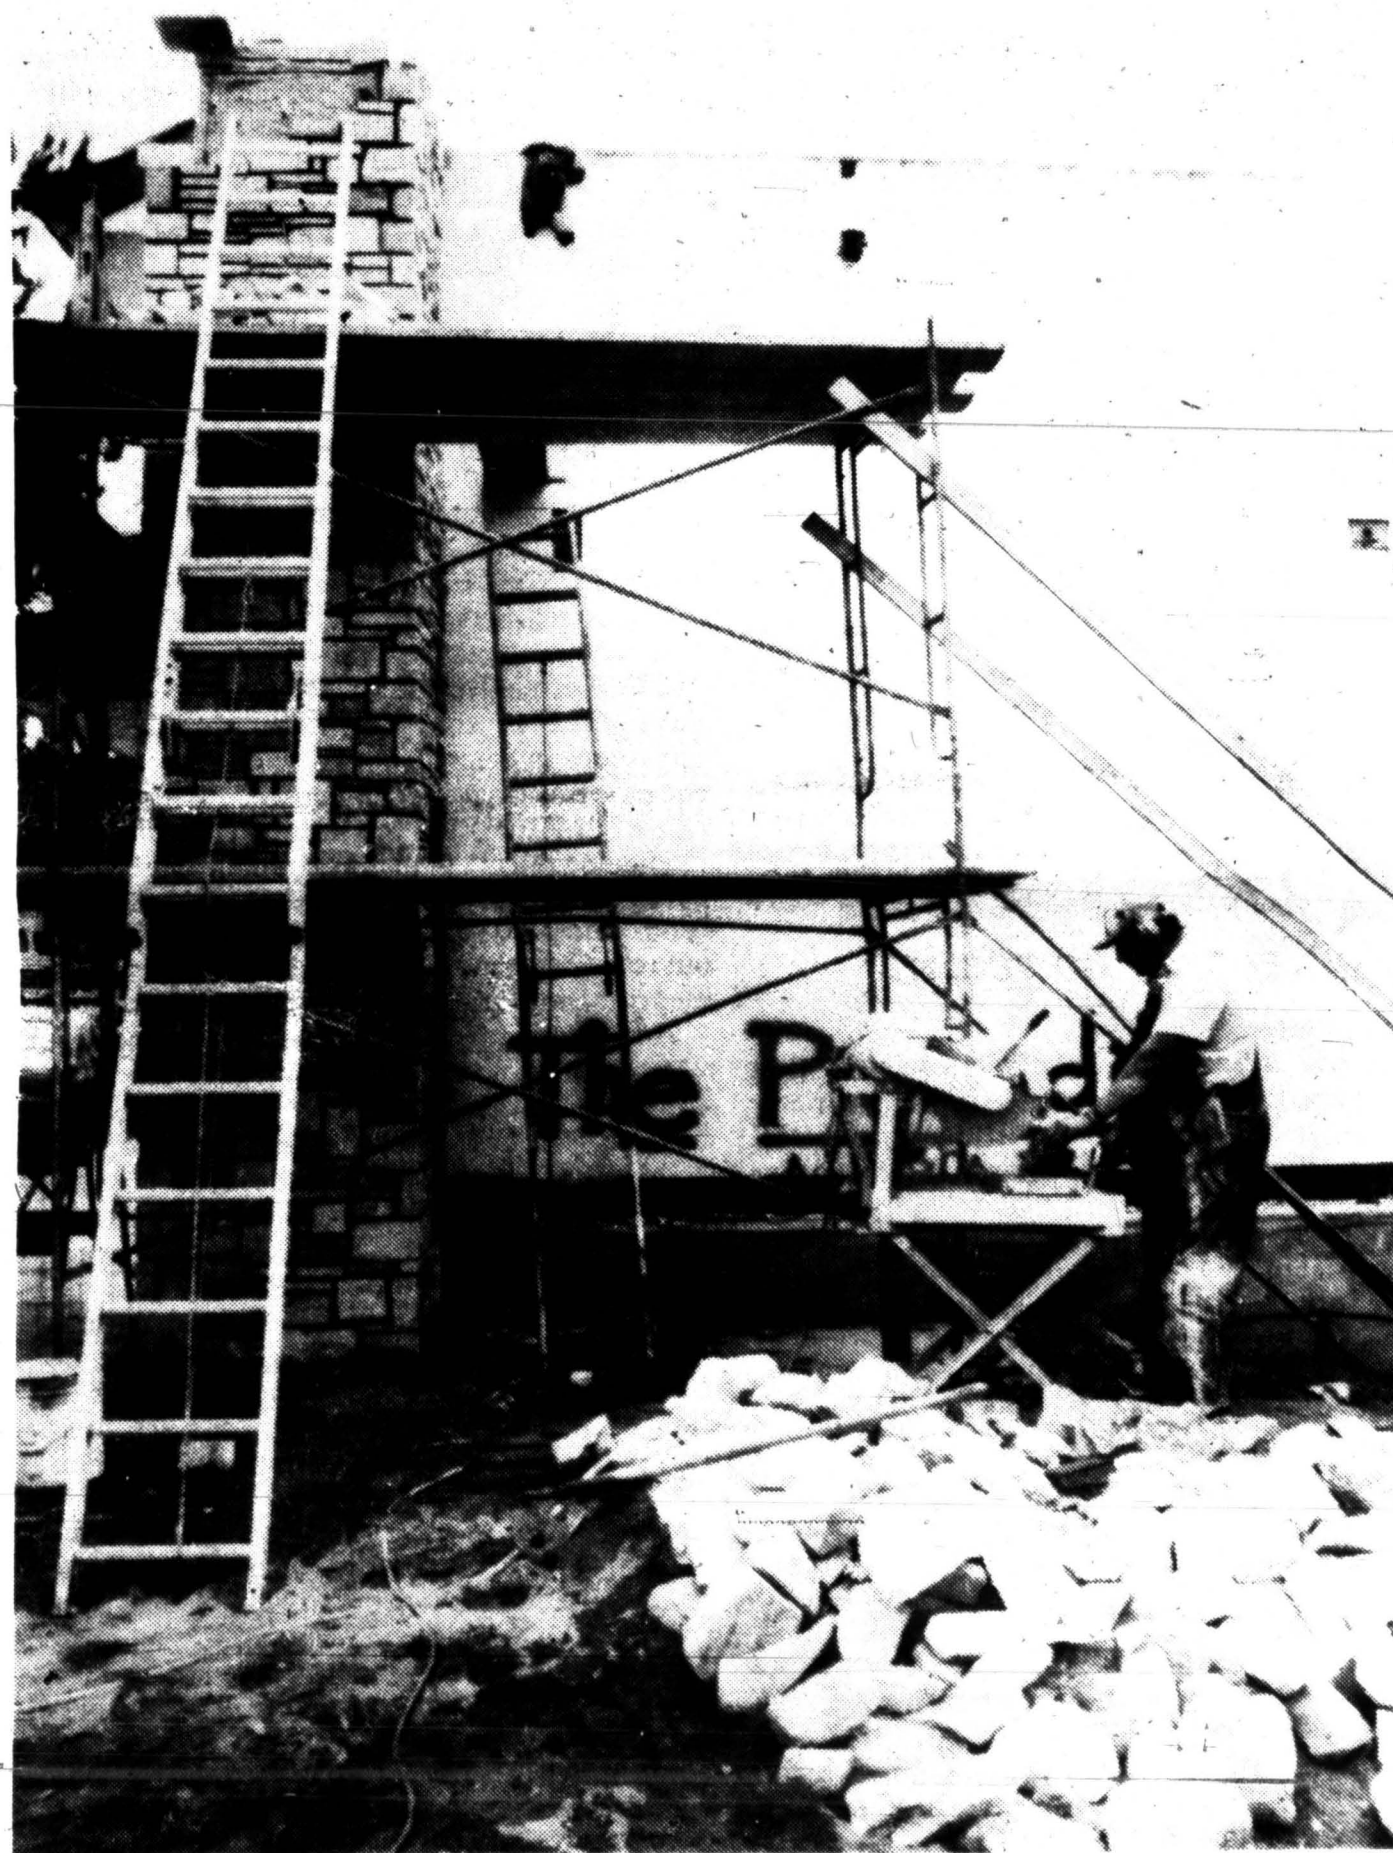

"Public records are open to inspection at all times during the office hours of a state or local agency and every citizen has a right to inspect any public record, except as hereafter provided..."

The act specifically lists information that can be withheld from the public, such as personnel and litigation matters, and "sensitive" law enforcement records.

EVEN internal memoranda rarely can be kept secret under the Public Records Act.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. While there is no limit on length, brevity is encouraged. Opposed to purchase

Dear Editor:

At the Sept. 20, meeting of the Board of Directors of the Carmel Citizens Committee, careful consideration was given to the proposed City purchase of the Gamble property. This consists of an area of 56,000 sq. ft. in the block bounded by Dolores, 13th, Lincoln and Santa Lucia. It is zoned for residential use. There is only one house on the property; it has, in the opinion of the Board of Directors, no special architectural or historical interest.

The city proposes to offer $1,100,000 for the property, a very large sum for the city. As yet there is no indication how the money would be raised, or what city projects would be curtailed to finance the purchase. It would be most unfortunate if the city had to postpone action of such needs as senior citizen housing or improved parking facilities because of diversion of funds to the purchase of the Gamble property.

Under the General Plan for Carmel, which has been approved with significant public support, the present predominantly residential character of Carmel must be maintained. There seems no need for the city to purchase the property to maintain its residential zoning.

Should the council have further interest in purchasing the Gamble property, this process should be accompanied by public hearings and an opportunity for a public vote.

With these facts in mind, the Board of Directors of the Carmel Citizens Committee voted unanimously to express its opposition to city purchase of the Gamble property.

'No deposit, no return'

Dear Editor:

It was a Saturday, I believe, when it first happened. I was a new, proud property owner in the fair city of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Then, the fence which separated my cottage from the outside world was a "grapestake" fence. As I stood there, enjoying my new responsibility, I felt rooted, as if I had finally become a mature, responsible adult, and it was a good feeling.

Then I saw it, right inside a wide spot in that grapestake fence. By the look of it, it must have been deposited there early that morning. I was in a state of shock. "How could this happen to my new house?" I kept asking myself. I knew my neighbor on the right had one, and two of my neighbors across the street had one each.

Then there was that nice little lady behind me, who had two, and the house next to her had two, also. As I soon learned, there were no less than 10 dogs on my block alone. I have also come to find out that this number is not unusual in any given block in Carmel. As I went out to the easement that Saturday, I saw two more "deposits." These two were left some days ago, as they were quite dry and almost odorless.

Now I was really in a dilemma. What should I do with these "deposits?" I couldn't put them in my trash can; aside from the odor all week long, I couldn't do that to my trashmen. I couldn't leave them in the yard, and if I left them in the easement my house guests would surely step in them and bring them right into my house. I finally came up with the only solution I felt was equitable.

I got my shovel and redeposited one to the yard across the street, then one up the street, and the last for my neighbor to the right. My grapestake fence has now been replaced with a six-foot redwood fence and a strong gate. My actions, of course, won the affection of the neighborhood.

I was greeted by comments of "You belong in (the slums)," "Anyone who doesn't like dogs shouldn't live in Carmel," and "What a rude neighbor you are!" One dear little old lady even whacked my shin with her cane as I handed her dog's deposit to her in a bag.

My dilemma deepened when I learned that these dogs can roam the neighborhood as long as they are in "voice control." This brings to my mind a great vision of a little old lady opening the door for her favorite canine and commanding by voice, "Don't deposit in the yard, dearie. Go do it in the neighborhood!"

The confusing thing about this situation is when I asked these responsible, courteous, mature dog owners to clean up after their dogs, they snapped back at me with brilliant comments like: "I don't have anything to clean up with," "Oh, shut up, you dog hater" and "You should be ashamed of yourself, making an old lady like me do this." But the ultimate answer, which wins the prize for most used has got to be: "My dog didn't do it." How can that be? Nobody's dog did any "depositing" in my neighborhood or the beach. How did it get there? It must be the phantom dog.

In desperation I called the animal control officer and explained my situation. After listening to my problem, the animal control lady looked me in the eye and with a matronly smile asked: "Why do you dislike dogs so much?" Was I hearing right? Was this all a bad dream? Am I a dog hater? No! I am not a dog hater!

I like dogs and have owned several myself. Am I a rude neighbor for wanting to keep the neighborhood clean and free of the smell of dog deposits? There is a lady in my block who walks her dogs past my house every day. One is a small terrier type on a leash. The other is a large Afghan hound which is not leashed. When I asked her why the large dog was not leashed, she said it was too big to control on a leash.

The Carmel Beach is a sad place to go these days. One of the few white sand beaches anywhere in the world is slowly being turned the color of dog-deposit brown. Picnicking is out of the question because of the dogs on "voice control" who run right through your camp spreading sand all over you and your food, and some dogs even take the food right out of your small children's hands, not to mention how frightening it is for the kids.

Am I a rude neighbor? Am I the person who should move? What ever happened to consideration and kindness? Am I supposed to clean up after everyone else's dog? I choose not to have a dog because I don't want the responsibility of cleaning up after it, and yet I am forced to do just that if I want to keep my neighborhood clean.

My solution may seem to be harsh to those dog owners who are too ignorant to be responsible for their dogs, but the truth is their dogs and their dogs' deposits are their responsibility, no matter where they and their dogs are.

My solution is as follows: in order to have your dogs in public (on the street, on the beach, or downtown or anywhere but your own yard) it must be on a leash and you must have the means to clean up after it (i.e., a pooper-scooper). Do away with the "voice control" leeway now granted. If you are found in violation of either, you will be cited — no exceptions!

City violated public trust with secret memos

SECRET government is secret government, whether the secrecy is carried out deliberately or unintentionally. Whenever the public right to know what is going on in government is compromised, constitutional rights to full participation in government are diminished.

That is precisely what has been going on in the city of Carmel for many months, as the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook only recently learned.

Through a regular series of Friday written memoranda to the Carmel City Council, City Administrator Douglas Schmitz has briefed the council on past, present and future business, suggested courses of action for the council, and provided the council with a running commentary on anything and everything pertinent to the operation of the city.

In at least one instance, the city administrator advised council members not to discuss an item of city business with this newspaper.

All of this has been carried on in secret. Until recent weeks when this newspaper demanded copies of these writings, not once did the city administrator or any council members make available to the press or public any copies of these memoranda, and yet everything covered in them is public business.

According to provisions of the Ralph M. Brown Act — which sets forth ground rules for press and public access to meetings of public agencies — any and all agendas, memos, and other writings distributed to members of a public body for consideration or discussion at a public meeting are public records.

These writings must be made available to the press and public either prior to discussion of issues contained therein, or must be distributed to the public at the point of their discussion in the course of a public meeting, according to the Brown Act.

Under pressure from the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook, the city administrator released copies of the council memoranda last week covering approximately a two-month period. Their contents are summarized in a news account published in this week's edition.

By prior agreement, the only portions of the memos excluded were those sections which dealt with personnel matters for which specific exemptions under law could be sustained. Although the copies of the memos provided clearly had portions deleted, Schmitz has not yet indicated the specific provisions of law under which those deletions were made.

CITY OFFICIALS have claimed ignorance on this one. They say they weren't aware that such memos were public information, and have promised to make copies of future memos available to the press and public.

It's nice to know Carmel city officials have acknowledged a wrong and have determined not to repeat it. We're not exactly brimming with confidence that other ploys in the direction of secrecy won't be undertaken in the expressed interests of smooth government.

Lately, the Carmel City Council has developed a marked tendency to conduct its business out of view of the public. One recent example was the controversy over the McFarland seawall, which gained Coastal Commission approval as part of the city beach repair project without the prior knowledge of the council.

As top city officials were digging in to clear out this mess, the council was kept informed through Schmitz's memos — but the public had no idea what was going on. Only after the council had asked the Coastal Commission to exclude the project did it become public knowledge through coverage in the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

The recent decision by the council to make an offer of $1.1 million to purchase the Gamble property is another example of less-than-adequate public notice of city business. The item was not listed on the council agenda, but possible condemnation of the property was discussed in a closed council session before the council came out to vote — with no members of the public present — to make the offer.

Somehow the disclaimer of ignorance of the laws pertaining to public information just isn't convincing. It is the responsibility of the elected members of the city council — as public servants — to insure that the public is fully informed of city business.

Where there has been disregard for this basic requirement of the public trust in the past, there now must be extreme diligence and consciousness of the public interest. And we will be watching to see that this is the case.

land-use planning — is essential if our new supervisor is to be truly effective.

Viewed in this light, I believe Karin Strasser Kauffman stands head and shoulders above her opponent. Because I am confident, therefore, that she will make the better supervisor, I'll be casting my vote for Karin. I hope you will do the same.

May stop commercial building

Carmel close to water allocation limit; may vote mandatory steps

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A DRY year and a disputed water allocation formula have combined to perhaps accomplish what city ordinances have been unable to do — stop commercial development in Carmel.

Mandatory water conservation measures are expected to be considered by the Carmel City Council in light of news that the city used 98 percent of its allocation in the water year July 1 to June 30.

The council will discuss the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District report when it meets at 4 p.m. Oct. 2 at city hall.

It is important that Carmel soon cut its water use because the water district has the power to order a moratorium on all new water meters if the city uses 100 percent of its allocation.

That moratorium would in effect halt all new development in Carmel, city Planner Brian Roseth told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

"If we exceed 100 percent the district has the authority to place a moratorium on the city to prevent any more water meters, which would effectively halt development at the status quo," Roseth said.

The city used 1,017.6 acre feet of its 1,030 acre-foot allocation, according to the figures released by water district Manager Bruce Buel Sept. 19.

Buel said Carmel is the "closest" any jurisdiction has been to exceeding the water allocation limit since the formula was first imposed after the 1975-76 drought.

And Buel added that water use is up to a critical level district-wide.

The different cities and Monterey County consumed 17,130 acre feet of water, while use in 1982-83 was 15,800 acre feet, Buel said. (There are 325,851 gallons of water in one acre foot.)

"That's a substantial increase (8.25 percent)," Buel said.

The area could face a crisis if the peninsula continues to use water at the current rate and there isn't a wet winter, he warned.

"We can make it through this summer, but if we have another dry winter then we're in serious trouble," Buel predicted.

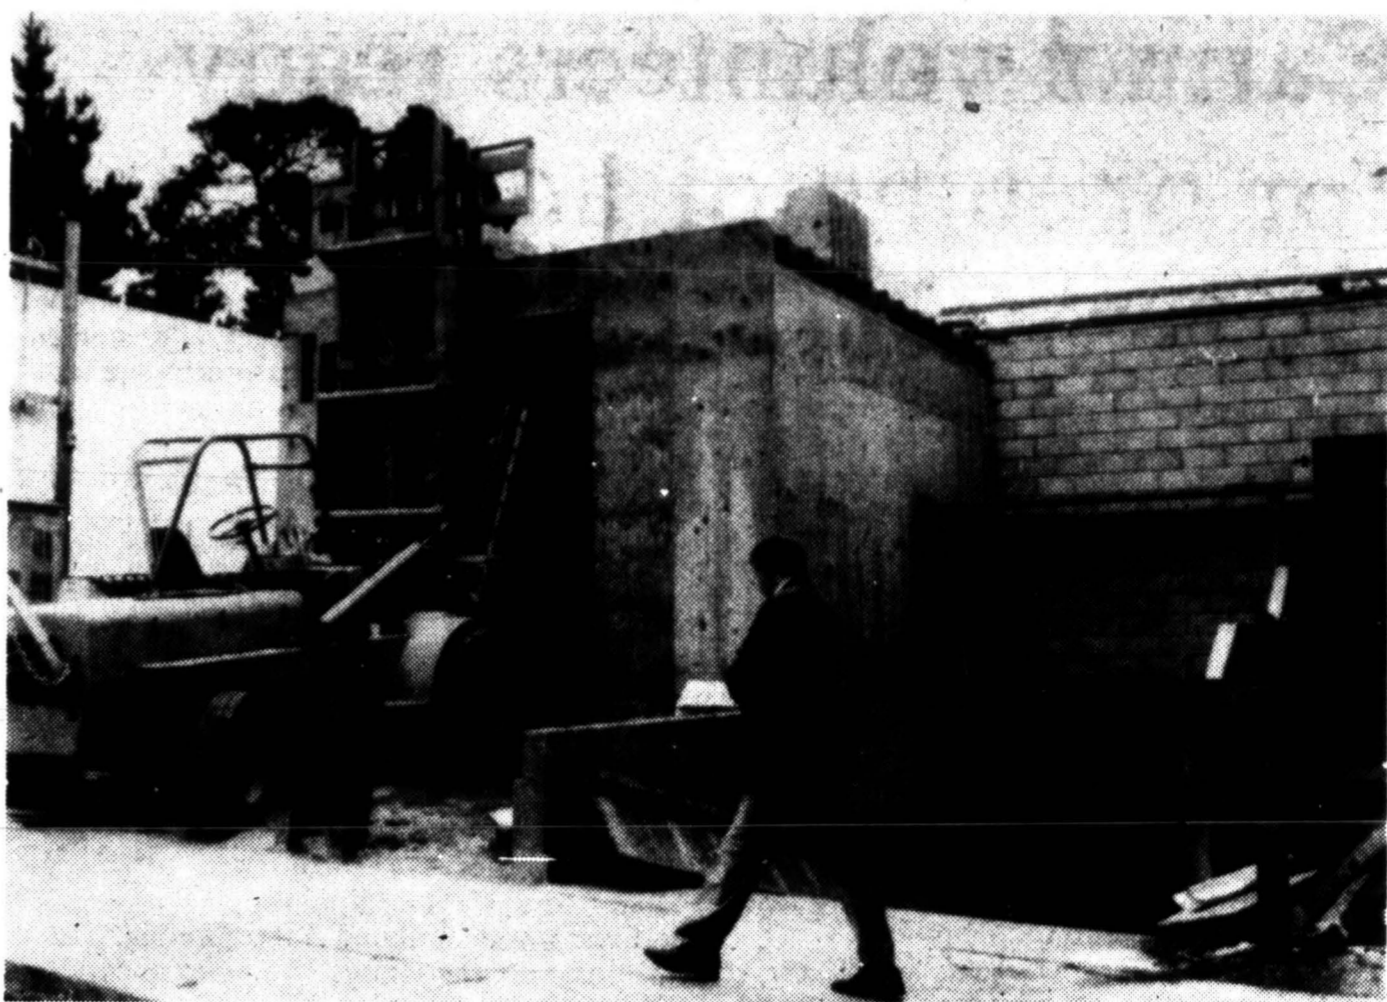

The city has anticipated the bad news for several months. A temporary water conservation ordinance was adopted in January that restricted use in the commercial district.

Preparation of a comprehensive permanent water conservation ordinance, already was underway when the figures were released.

ROSETH, who is in charge of most water-related issues, said he does not anticipate a swift move to more controls because of the many issues involved.

For example, any severe restriction on growth must accompany "reasonable options" for a developer. Those reasonable options would have to be considered as part of any growth-controlling action by the city, Roseth said.

"It's going to take some time to put this thing together," he said. "Just saying more

THIS SCENE of a new building being constructed may become a rarity in Carmel as the city ponders potential commercial growth restrictions because of a water shortage crisis. City water use is 2 percent less than its allocation. If city water consumption reaches 100 percent of its allocation, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District could impose a moratorium on new water meters, which would halt development in Carmel. The above building is an office and retail complex on Dolores Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues. (Michael Gardner photo.)

restrictions is not the answer, but it may be part of the answer."

Roseth explained that there are several courses of action the city may want to take.

The first and most likely is further restrictions on water use.

The city could seek an adjustment in the water allocation formula so that it gets a better share of the water supply.

However, the city has thrice tried that approach and all three times been rejected. Basically, members of the district board of directors refuse to give Carmel more water because that additional water would have to come out of their own supply.

The city also could "do nothing" and force the district to impose a moratorium on new water meters.

Then the city could possibly join with affected property owners in a lawsuit to charge that the allocation system is unfair and prejudicial to Carmel, Roseth said.

The city has an unadopted priority list for development if Carmel exceeds 95 percent of its water allocation.

The list is included in the draft ordinances for the land use plan of the Carmel Local Coastal Program. The council has agreed to the ordinances "in concept," but they have not been adopted, Roseth said.

A portion of the draft land use program ordinances states that first priority for water is to be given to new single-family residences.

Second priority is to be given to other developments that "increase the permanent housing stock" in Carmel.

Last on the list is new commercial development.

The existing city water-conservation ordinance is a little more lenient toward new commercial development.

That ordinance prohibits new commercial development if it would increase water use by 5 percent more than what was being previously consumed at the site.

Supervisors deny allegations in Carmel lawsuit over Mission Ranch

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors has denied allegations in a city of Carmel lawsuit that claims the county erred when it rezoned the Mission Ranch resort.

In a separate response to the city of Carmel lawsuit, Mission Ranch Corp. attorneys have asked that Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver not be assigned to preside over the trial.

No trial date has been scheduled.

Supervisors in July rezoned the Mission Ranch property for residential use. The rezoning is an initial step in the eventual demolition of the ranch buildings just south of the city limits near Carmel Mission.

The corporation wants to build an approximately 65-unit residential complex on the site. The corporation sought the rezoning because the property previously was not zoned for residential use.

The city contends that the area is in a floodplain, that the rezoning creates too high an allowable density and that the county did not set aside enough protected wetlands.

The city wants an injunction to delay the rezoning until after the environmental impact report for the project is completed.

The county, in its response, denies the allegations and also charges that the property is not in the city's sphere of influence.

City consulting biologist Dr. Robert Curry, who wants more protected wetlands, based his report on "hypothetical assumptions and not upon hydrological conditions," the county response claims.

The county has set aside 4.68 acres as protected wetlands. However, the city wants between eight and 12 acres set aside for protection from development.

In addition, Mission Ranch Corp. officials have asked that Judge Silver not preside over the trial. The corporation believes that Silver is "prejudiced."

The request does not say why Mission Ranch Corp. is opposed to Silver. Attorney Brian Finegan refused to elaborate.

MONTEREY COUNTY supervisors have denied allegations in a lawsuit by the city of Carmel that the county erred in rezoning the Mission Ranch Resort, and have charged that the property is not within the sphere of influence of the city. No date has been set for trial.

Carmelites to assist with opening of aquarium

By FLORENCE MASON

WITH THE opening Oct. 20 of the Monterey Bay Aquarium, Carmel residents and visitors will have access to one of the finest aquariums in the world.

That's one local aspect of the occasion, which comes after many years of planning and prodigious effort, as well as expenditures of some $40 million. Capital costs came from the Packard Foundation; operating costs will be covered by admission fees, memberships and fund-raising efforts.

The aquarium director is Julie Packard, a marine biologist who has lived in Carmel Valley since 1979. The staff is an assemblage of the finest talent in the field, and the exhibits, tanks, educational offerings and supporting services are outstanding.

Much more will be written and said about the Monterey Bay Aquarium in coming weeks. Many Carmel residents will serve as aquarium guides, stationed at the exhibits to answer questions and enhance the enjoyment and understanding of the thousands of visitors.

These volunteers already have devoted themselves to the project with an intensive 15-week course in marine biology, plus at least one separate specialty course in an area of their choice. Now, each guide will serve at least 12 hours per month. Some will remain at one post, while others will conduct tours throughout the buildings, or go out to schools, clubs and other organizations to talk about the aquarium and share some of its treasures.

Anne Davis, volunteer coordinator, estimates that about 20 percent of the more than 300 aquarium volunteers are Carmel residents — a high percentage, considering the population of our city. Among the guides from Carmel and Carmel Valley are the following enthusiastic "interpreters" of the aquarium's offerings and spirit.

From a home aquarium to the Monterey Bay Aquarium is a big step for Jean Fitton, but that's how it started for her. The 15-week course in marine biology that all aquarium guides took required her to do her homework "with a dictionary," but except for feeling a little cowed by some of her more knowledgeable and experienced fellow students, she considered the course to be "great."

Jean visited the Baltimore aquarium last month. "It's new and beautiful but it was hard to find any docents or guides, even though they said they were there," she said. "I went out of my way to observe them, but I only saw two in a three-hour period. I'm sure it won't be that way here!"

Not likely, as the first class of guides included 300 people and there is a long waiting list for the proposed second class next spring. In the marine mammal section of the Monterey Bay Aquarium alone, there will be two to four guides on duty every hour that the aquarium is open.

ONE OF those experienced students who might have "cowed" Jean Fitton was Mary Beach. A visitor to the peninsula since 1955 and a resident for 16 years, she was already a docent at Point Lobos.

Mary considered the 15-week course "fantastic!" She appreciated the fact that it included a good deal of humor as well as much information. "It was light, so we didn't panic. And they kept assuring us that we would all make it."

Carmel volunteers ready for opening of aquarium

Mary enrolled in the specialty course on marine mammals. She came out of that 12-hour course, covering four evenings at the aquarium, surprised by how much the whole group progressed in that short time.

"The last night surprised me," she said. "I think all of us had some concerns about our ability to 'interpret' the material we had been studying and then we found that we could!"

Mary, who has been a painter for many years, didn't want to become too reclusive. She expects to have a great many people to talk to as an aquarium guide. A member of the staff told her that as many as 7,500 people may show up for each of the opening days in October.

She had planned a trip east, but "I can't possibly leave!" Mary will particularly enjoy telling visitors about the dolphins and their amazing physical and social development, she said.

Claire Salmonson and her husband visited aquariums wherever they traveled, as part of an abiding interest in the environment, animals and — especially — sea otters. When they first came to the Monterey Peninsula, she took a course in oceanography at Monterey Peninsula College and found it fascinating. She found parts of the 15-week course for Monterey Bay Aquarium guides equally fascinating.

"I loved learning about what was going to happen at the aquarium, and how the orphaned otter pups were being raised," she said. But for the rest of the course: "It went into too much detail in too short a period of time." This did not, however, dim her enthusiasm for the whole project; she considered her specialty course in marine mammals to be "great."

As she put it: "We who do not skin dive can see what skin divers see." When the group with whom she practiced her interpretation skills declared themselves to be a group of older persons from a Monterey retirement complex, Claire acted the part so realistically that one of the staff members came over to see if she had really fainted.

All the specialty courses included information about and practice in following emergency procedures of various kinds, and all the guides are encouraged to become qualified in CPR techniques.

Claire also enjoyed "interpreting" to a group of her classmates who acted as children might during an aquarium tour.

Leslie Bavor found the marine biology course "very rigorous, but enjoyable." She heard about the aquarium guide program at Ord Terrace School in Seaside, where she had been teaching when applications were first circulated. Now she is a teacher and counselor at Los Arboles Middle School in Marina.

She didn't realize that the specialty course she chose — tour guides and education — was one of the harder ones. She and her fellow classmates will be qualified to take groups of aquarium visitors through the entire project, and to participate in educational activities in the field too. Her enthusiasm extends to the entire project: "It's done in a really fine manner, from the tiles on the floor

GAIL AND PETE Salmonson of Carmel are among a group of couples who have volunteered to serve as guides at the

to the ceilings. The location, the view, even the boiler room!"

ROBERT MILLER is a teacher, too. And what will he be doing in his private time? "Showing and telling" visitors to the aquarium, undoubtedly including many young people.

Miller trained in biology and is a science teacher in the magnet program at Ord Terrace School. He signed up for two specialty courses — marine mammals and the rocky intertidal habitat. He thought it was difficult for the aquarium staff to reach all the levels of education and experience reflected in the basic course and thinks they succeeded in hitting "a happy medium."

Used to the difficulties of being ready for opening days each fall in schools, Bob Miller was wondering — just a few weeks before the scheduled Oct. 20 aquarium opening — if they would really make it. He was encouraged to think they would by the experiences he has already had with the aquarium: his involvement with a group of teachers helping to develop the aquarium's curriculum for aquarium. He recently retired from military service, and both had an interest in the ocean and marine biology. (Mike Gardner photo.)

peninsula school students, and the well-organized basic course and specialty courses.

"It's not just a tourist attraction," he said. "I like being involved in a community effort." He also works with the Wildlife Rehabilitation Center and the Lyceum Board.

Another teacher — Warren Masten — has been interested in the ocean since he went snorkeling as a youngster of 12 or 13 years. In recent years, he has taken many fourth-graders on field trips to the shores, and he told of some of these experiences in a book with a delightful title: How to Take a Walking Field Trip and Live to Tell the Story.

Now Masten will tell the aquarium story. He realized that the basic course may have been difficult for those out of school for a while, but he complimented aquarium education director Steve Webster and his staff for their "laid back" approach, and assurances they would help the struggling students "1,000 percent."

"We'll be continually learning," Masten said. He took the specialty course for the hands-on tidepool exhibit.

"My favorite area is the trout stream," he Masten was another local teacher who helped develop the aquarium curriculum for students. "I feel very good about being in on the ground floor," he said. Only one exhibit features any flora or fauna not found here.

Pam Miller is a biology teacher at Seaside High School and she has two children of her own. She is looking forward to sharing the delights of the aquarium with all of them. She remembers hearing about the project nearly five years ago, and when she finally became a part of it with the 15-week course, she found it to be "excellent — one of the best courses I've ever had. I was comfortable with it because of my own background, but it wasn't too easy."

Pam chose the marine mammals specialty course, and she wants to help in the rocky shores area too. (Guides are encouraged to take as many specialty courses as they wish, and to "apprentice" to other areas as their time permits.)

GARTH Van Nest's wife heard about the aquarium on KBOQ and "got after me," he said. It didn't take much urging for him to sign up. A retired minister and former scoutmaster who enjoyed a nature study program with his scouts, he thought the introductory course was great.

"The whole program was masterfully planned," he said. "My only frustration is the gaps (in time) when we can't see what is going on." The last gap will be bridged when the aquarium opens Oct. 20, and before that, even, as a number of special events are planned for the week before the official opening date.

Van Nest signed up for the tour guides and education specialty course. He, like all the other guides, has been trained to be able to say "I don't know" when asked some question he can't answer. "But if I do, it won't be because of any lack of effort on the part of the aquarium staff," he said. His interest takes in "the whole thing — it's worthwhile for the community, worthy of our support. And I welcome all the contacts I'm making and will make."

Van Nest said he was wholly in accord with the philosophy that the guides are not there just to answer questions. He said: "Our purpose is to help visitors to open their eyes and ask questions and look further. We can't answer questions if they don't ask them! Our pleasure will derive from seeing their expressions and hearing their 'oohs and ahs.' It will be well worth the effort. Oct. 20 will be a great day!"

On that day, or soon thereafter, you may find Lola Blackwell by the kelp forest tank. It is bound to be one of the most popular spots in the aquarium. As Lola said: "I'll never be a scuba diver, so this is it — vicariously under water!"

The tank is 31 feet high and the huge strands of kelp move about at the urging of a wave machine.

Lola, who managed an inn in Carmel during the past year, took a course in marine biology at Long Beach State. She was "really impressed" by the 15-week course for guides, both by the quality of teaching and the variety. Before her experience as the manager of an inn, she was a nurse for 30 years.

Then it was time for a change, she said. Now she takes a course at Monterey Peninsula College in sales promotion for hotels and motels and looks forward with excitement to the opening of the aquarium. "There's lots of interest among my friends," she concluded. "I think they are all coming the first week!"

Gail and Pete Salmonsens are one of a number of couples who share the aquarium experience. Pete had recently retired from service as an army officer and their children were all out of local schools and on their way to college when the Salmonsens first heard about the aquarium and the guide program.

"The article in the paper was very small — only about 20 lines — but it caught our attention," Pete said. "We had spent a lot of time with our kids and their school activities; now it was time to do something else. And we wanted to learn more about the bay and the ocean, to contribute to an exciting project."

Neither had grown up near the ocean (Vermont is the one land-locked New England state) so they enjoyed and appreciated the 15-week course in marine biology. "It opened up a whole new world," Pete said. Gail found the information about the touch pool so interesting that she enrolled in that specialty course, while Pete became a tour guide.

He also signed up for the speakers program and will go out to service clubs and schools to talk about the aquarium, as time permits. He has just taken on a challenging new job, helping a truck company in Salinas get off the ground.

One of the things the Salmonsens like best about their aquarium experience to date is that it has encouraged them to expand their appreciation of the entire area — to go to Ano Nuevo to see the elephant seals, to visit other marine labs, and to go bird-watching. The history of the area has become another interest for Pete, and he plans to take a second specialty course in that so he can help with the aquarium museum.

Gail said they "did" the Boston aquarium on a recent trip east. "It has an excellent reputation," she said. "And it is very popular. We stood in line 30 minutes to get in." She was particularly interested in seeing how the touch pool compared to the one in the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

"Ours is much more open," she concluded. "And I didn't see many guides in Boston. Those that were there weren't doing anything, weren't helping the kids." It will be different here, she is certain, as the specialty courses all included an entire session on the difference in children's development at various stages, and what those differences might mean in terms of their experience in our aquarium.

Joan Peacock has a hard time distinguishing between her vocations and avocations. She taught school for 22 years, took early retirement and has been all over the peninsula, its shoreline and tidepools.

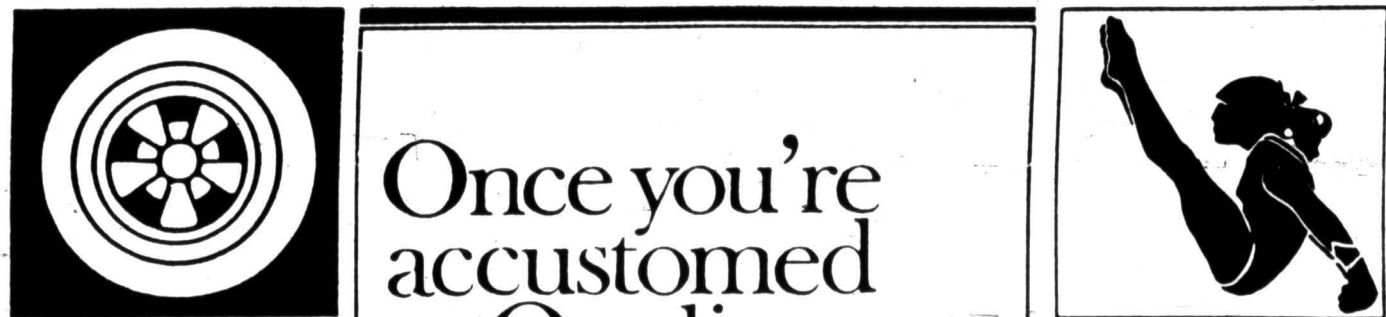

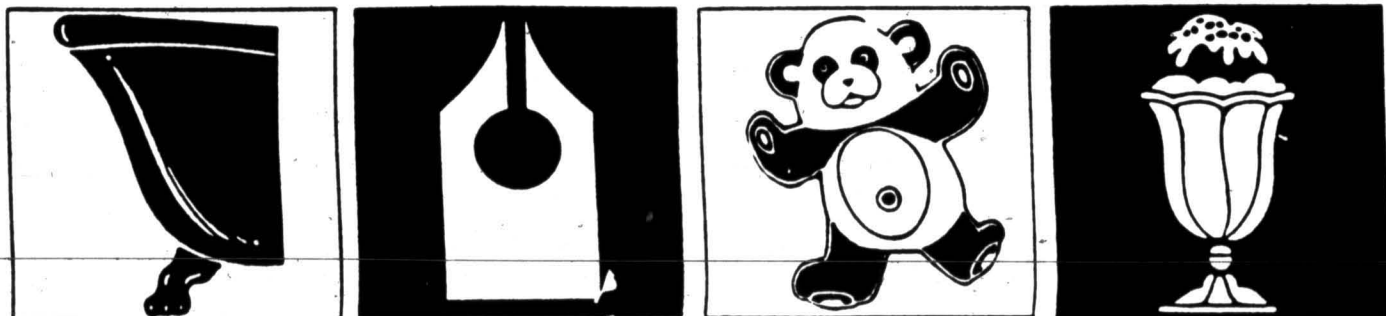

"I knew Carmel when there was only one policeman," she said. "When I was growing up, there was no one who could take children around and explain these wonderful things to them." She did something about that when she grew up: for more than 30 years she has been taking groups of school kids of all ages around the peninsula. "It became more than a hobby," she said. "As soon as I knew the aquarium was going to use volunteers, I got in touch with a friend at the Hopkins Marine Lab, and through him made my first contact with the aquarium. I thought the original course was terrific. I took the tour guide and education specialty course and I can hardly wait for the opening! The one question I get from all my friends is: 'When?'"

When, of course, is Oct. 20. Almost every one of these Carmelites used the word "exciting" or "excitement" at some point when talking about the aquarium. They and 290 other aquarium guides are about to take on the task for which they have trained so long and so well — to convey that sense of excitement to the thousands of visitors who will pass through the doors of the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

SECRET COUNCIL MEMOS RELEASED

vided that the public interest in withholding such records clearly outweighs the public interest in disclosure."

In addition, the state open meeting law (The Brown Act) requires that agendas or other writings related to issues to be addressed in a public meeting must be made available to the public before or at the time the information is given to the council.

The information in the Friday letters almost always pertained to council meeting topics. After Schmitz verbally refused to release the letters, this newspaper provided the city administrator and city attorney with a letter that details the Public Records Act and the city's responsibility to provide public information.

Schmitz then complied and provided copies of several "Friday letters" dating back two months.

Schmitz also has agreed to provide copies of future memos.

There have been several concerns expressed by city officials in relation to the release of the memos.

The most common complaint expressed by the council is that release of the documents could cut off a vital communications tool between the council and the city administrator.

There also was concern that Schmitz and his staff have been forced by this newspaper to spend valuable time at a cost to the city to research the documents and delete provisions related to personnel and litigation.

Those problems appear to be solved under a compromise proposed by Schmitz.

SCHMITZ WILL continue the Friday memos to the council. The first few pages will be public-related matters and the last pages would be reserved for personnel and litigation.

Thus, the public could easily obtain the letters without Schmitz being forced to go through the memos and delete the personnel and litigation discussions.

"I wasn't sure they were public information," Schmitz told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook. "Secondly, I think the executive officer of an organization should have the possibility of communicating with his board of directors without seeing everything in the press."

Schmitz continued that he is "happy and willing" to provide future documents to the media and public.

The Friday memos, Schmitz said, are his tools to effectively communicate with the council on past, present and future issues.

The memos also were used to tell the council about citizens who had called him and asked to address the council on specific issues, Schmitz said.

"It was a technique to let them be prepared when I received inquiries from citizens who want to discuss various municipal activities," he continued.

The memos reported on a variety of topics that ranged from heated controversial issues to the everyday business of running a city.

One of the most frequent issues that made its way on the pages of the letters was the seawall constructed by Craig McFarland to protect his beach-front residence.

The council had complained that McFarland had inappropriately "piggybacked" his $170,000 seawall on the city coastal permit for its beach rehabilitation project.

The council also questioned whether the city would be liable should McFarland's wall collapse and injure someone.

There also is some question whether the seawall is on private or public property.

And, there have been complaints that the seawall is "ugly" and has never been reviewed by city planners.

McFarland since has been working on a new plan to brace and landscape the seawall. Those plans still must be presented to the planning commission.

SCHMITZ' letters — and memos written by assistant Greg D'Ambrosio while Schmitz was on vacation — discuss the seawall even though no mention of it was made in a previous public council session.

The seawall was included in three of the four July memos and included references to "stonewalling" and "frustrating."

And one of those memos contains information previously not made public by city officials despite two separate stories in this newspaper.

That information is the fact the city had thoughts of giving back to McFarland his beach property he had earlier deeded to the city as a gift, according to the memo.

Such an offer was not publicized by the city or McFarland in interviews with this newspaper about the controversy.

A July 13 memo written by D'Ambrosio referred to a meeting between himself, Don Freeman, city attorney, Clayton Neill, city engineer; and David Shonman, beach consultant.

D'Ambrosio wrote that they "agreed that the best approach towards getting the problems of the McFarland wall settled is to possibly return the land gift of the McFarland property and allow the Coastal Commission to force the issue."

D'Ambrosio also used harsh language in writing about progress in negotiations with McFarland.

"Don (Freeman) has contacted McFarland's attorney, Doc Etienne, requesting the receipt of all survey and structural design documents for this structure,"

The state open meeting law (The Brown Act) requires that agendas or other writings related to issues to be addressed in a public meeting must be made available to the public before or at the time the information is given to the council.

D'Ambrosio informed the council in his substitute Friday memo.

"We have been 'stonewalled' for four weeks by excuses. Don has given them a deadline of Monday, 16 July 1984 to provide the documents.

"If we do not receive the expected materials I will move forward with a directive to Clayton Neill to survey the property and the wall."

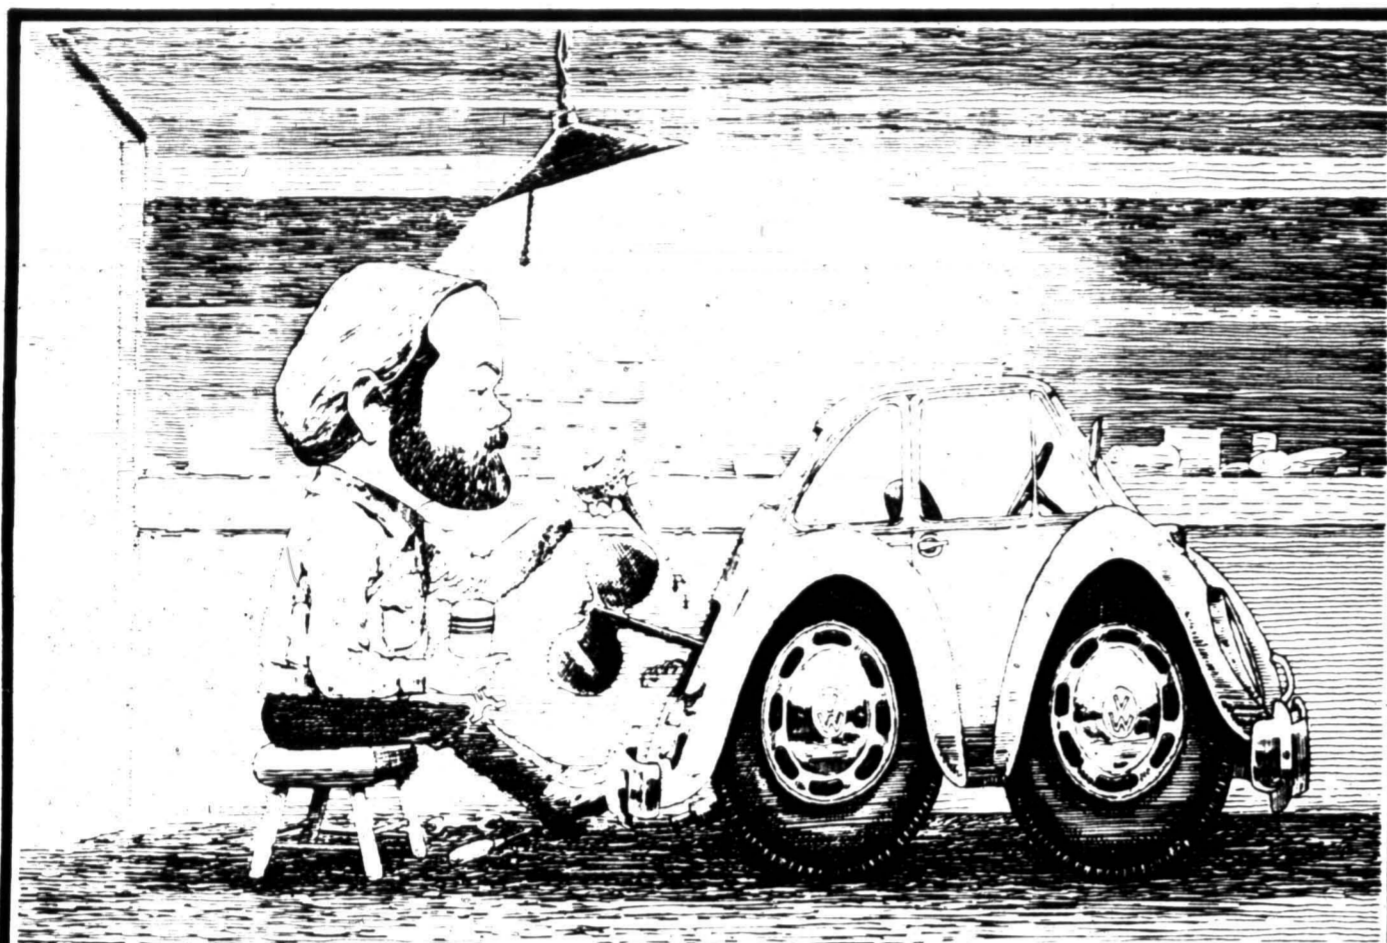

A week later, D'Ambrosio wrote: "We finally contacted McFarland's attorney, Doc Etienne, concerning the survey of this site. Don Freeman informed Etienne that the city intends to return the scenic easement that was accepted by the council last December back to McFarland.

"The city then would avoid any liability and maintenance responsibility for this structure. Once this is done, the Coastal Commission will force Bestor (McFarland's engineer) and McFarland to correct the structural problems as soon as possible."

"It appears that McFarland and his consultants are now cooperating with us as requested. This has been a long and frustrating process but in the end I believe the city will be satisfied."

The next week Schmitz returned and wrote that the city should ask the Coastal Commission to exclude the seawall from the city permit for its beach rehabilitation project.

"Thus, McFarland would have to deal directly with the Coastal Commission and submit an application for his wall," Schmitz wrote.

"I believe this is the cleanest and easiest way to go if acceptable to the commission and also requires McFarland to deal directly with the coastal staff and the attorney general rather than with the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea," Schmitz concluded.

Schmitz even took space in the memo to tell the council that the seawall story had been uncovered by this newspaper.

"The editor of the Carmel Pine Cone (Robert Miskimon) has made several inquiries this week regarding the McFarland seawall and it is my understanding that a story about the wall will be printed in a forthcoming edition.

"Mr. Miskimon has requested copies of particular items in our file and has also contacted the regional representative of the Coastal Commission," Schmitz wrote.

The McFarland seawall issue still is pending before the Coastal Commission. He also has not yet submitted to the city planning commission his plans to brace and further landscape the seawall.

McFarland has denied that his beach property deed is related to the seawall. McFarland pointed out that he made the gift offer to the city when Doug Peterson was city administrator, well before the 1982-83 winter storms forced the need for the seawall.

The city has decided to keep the McFarland gift because the seawall is not on that scenic easement.

Another McFarland project also is the subject of the Friday letters on another project — this one is his still-under-construction Cottage Row, northwest corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue.

McFarland and the city have agreed on a compromise by which he will provide some plantings in return for permission for several of his windows to protrude in the public right-of-way.

In the Friday, Aug. 10 letter Schmitz told the council of the encroachment. The issue was not publicly addressed until the Sept. 4 council meeting.

"I noticed earlier this week that the windows which protrude from the Cottage Row structure on the Sixth Avenue side appeared to penetrate the public right-of-way plane," Schmitz wrote.

Schmitz wrote that he discussed the potential encroachment with the planning staff (Butch Maloney, Diane White and Brian Roseth), which confirmed his suspicions.

"Butch stated that the architect for the project had been told some time ago that all that was required was the filing of a hold harmless (agreement) with the city.

"WHILE THE city would require a hold harmless, the hold harmless would not be applicable unless the applicant had received authorization to encroach into the right-of-way.

"Thus, Mr. McFarland had been permitted to bypass the first step (encroachment permit) and merely to comply with the second hold harmless."

In the Aug. 30 memo, Schmitz informed the council that Maloney had "hand-delivered a letter to the foreman of the Cottage Row project" which forced work to stop on the windows.

The compromise whereby McFarland would provide plantings in return for the encroachment was not worked out in public session. Instead, Schmitz discussed it with individual council members privately, according to the memo.

"In discussing the encroachment with some council members, a possible compromise was proposed..." Schmitz wrote.

The Friday memos addressed several other major topics. Following is a brief outline of some of the issues addressed by Schmitz each Friday:

• La Playa paint color: This now-settled controversy erupted when La Playa owners painted the hotel a different color than originally submitted and planners refused to okay the new color.

The controversy eventually boiled over to health and safety concerns, parking problems, and disputes over the landscaping.

After numerous meetings and a court-approved compromise, the hotel opened.

One interesting paragraph in an Aug. 17 memo tells the council not to discuss the issue with this newspaper.

"I would anticipate that the members of the council will be receiving phone calls from Mike Gardner (Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook reporter) asking for comments and I would like to remind you that this matter is coming to the council on appeal and the council members should make no comment publicly prior to the appeal hearing," Schmitz wrote.

D'Ambrosio was a bit more eloquent in his writing about La Playa.

FOR EXAMPLE, on July 13 D'Ambrosio wrote that the city has given La Playa a list of complaints about the color, landscaping and health and safety-related concerns.

"The ball is now in Mr. (John) Cope's court as to whether he can meet all of these requirements," D'Ambrosio wrote.

D'Ambrosio continued the issue in the July 20 memo. "Last week's Friday letter contained Act 1 of the continuing saga of the La Playa Hotel. As of 5 p.m. Friday 13 July the hotel owners had not carried out and completed their responsibilities concerning health, safety and welfare issues necessary to open."

The memo then detailed the court compromise and told the council that La Playa would be allowed to open.

• Piccadilly Park. The continued delay in development of Piccadilly Park, west side of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, has been a source of problems for the city.

The park is mentioned in four memos among the total from two months correspondence.

"The problems with the construction of the park continue. The plans call for an arbor to be attached to the (Toots Lagoon) wall. When the contractor began installation of the first arbor attachment, it became evident that the interior of the wall was termite-infested and that the wall would not hold the weight of the arbor," Schmitz wrote in the July 27 Friday letter.

"(Public Works Director) Bill Askew shut the job down and called Frank Lee, our consulting engineer, to analyze the possibility and costs associated with the constructing of the arbor as a freestanding structure."

The Friday letters reported that Lee said it would cost the city from $2,000 to $10,000 for a freestanding overhang.

On Aug. 24 Schmitz wrote that park landscape designer Gordon Andrews is to prepare some alternatives for the park.

"I have decided on a free-standing design utilizing the existing columns only and have requested Gordon Andrews to prepare a revised plan immediately."

Construction of the park since has resumed. City Forester Gary Kelly has predicted a fall planting.

Freeway committee to meet Oct. 2

A PLAN to widen Highway 1 rather than construct the Hatton Canyon Freeway is to be discussed by the Hatton Canyon Freeway Advisory Committee at its next meeting.

The committee will meet at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 2, at the courthouse complex in Monterey. The session is open to the public.

The meeting also will mark a minor victory for the city of Carmel in its dispute with the Monterey County Board of Supervisors over membership in the committee.

The city council wanted a representative on the committee because it believed the group was not balanced and had only one objective in mind — to get the freeway constructed.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold pushed for city representation because she believed the committee would not seriously address the alternate widening of Highway 1.

But supervisors rejected that request because they believe the committee is balanced and there are enough members. The council then appealed to Ken Jones of the California Department of Transportation (CalTrans), who is in charge of the committee.

Jones agreed with the city and has authorized two new members: Gene Hammond, a city planning commissioner; and Dottie Lillard, a member of the city traffic committee.

The committee will have four agenda items to tackle at its Oct. 2 session.

One of the more controversial issues to be discussed is widening Highway 1 rather than building the freeway.

Supporters of the widening concept claim it would be less expensive and still allow for smooth traffic flow.

Council explains swift offer on Gamble estate

AN IMMEDIATE offer to buy the Gamble Estate for $1.1 million was necessary because members of the Carmel City Council feared a developer would beat them to the property.

Councilman Robert Stephenson, who was acting mayor earlier this week while Mayor Charlotte Townsend attended a League of California Cities meeting, gave that rationale to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook for a council decision Sept. 18 to make an offer for the property.

"It had come to the council's attention that developers were interested in the property," Stephenson said Monday.

"The fact is the city didn't want it to be developed into a cookie-cutter tract of homes."

The council may have a reply to its quick $1.1 million offer for the property by the time it meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 2 at city hall.

A joint meeting of the council and planning commission has been scheduled to ensure that purchase of the property does not conflict with the city general plan. The open session will be at 4 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 3 at city hall.

Stephenson said he welcomes public discussion on the proposed purchase.

"If there's enough opposition then the council will probably listen to it. You make an offer. That's not a final decision," Stephenson said.

The Gamble estate lists seven individuals and two separate trusts as heirs. Any offer would have to be accepted by all of the heirs.

The heirs have three choices: accept the offer, deny it outright or make a counter-proposal.

The Gamble estate and 1920s-era home sits on 56,000 sq. ft. of tree-filled property bordered by Santa Lucia and 13th avenues, and Lincoln and Dolores streets.

The council, after a brief public session Sept. 18, decided the property was valuable enough to try to save and unanimously voted to offer $1.1 million.

Realtor Ben Heinrich of Heinrich, Dusenbury and Albers confirmed that there have been "several" offers on the property since it went on the market six weeks ago.

City Administrator Doug Schmitz said his staff will wait and see if the offer is accepted before beginning work on proposed uses for the site and financing methods.

"There's no use spending a lot of staff time and council time if the offer is not accepted," he said.

IN OTHER action Oct. 2, the council is to:

- Consider a planning commission request for exemption to city time-limit parking requirements while at full-commission sessions and committee meetings.

The request has been made after two commissioners received parking tickets while attending a committee meeting on a Friday morning.

Current city policy is that there are no exemptions granted. Mayor Charlotte Townsend even has received the $7 fine a time or two while she oversaw a council meeting.

- Conduct a public hearing on cable television service. The council wants to know what citizens think of the service provided by Monterey Peninsula Cable Television (MPTV).

Several citizens have voiced concerns about recent rate increases in monthly cable service. The contract between MPTV and the city expires in April 1985, Schmitz said.

- Hear a staff report on how and when to close Lincoln Street between Ocean and Sixth avenues temporarily so the city can gauge the impact closure would have on traffic.

The city has under consideration a plan to expand Harrison Memorial Library onto Lincoln Street, which would have an impact on traffic flow in that area.

What council discussed in secret

THERE ARE two issues that need to be clarified in a front-page story published in the Sept. 20 edition of the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

In that story and in the headline, this newspaper reported that the city council had discussed in closed session a $1.1 million offer for the Gamble estate. (See related story, this issue.)

The council only talked about eminent domain proceedings in closed session. When a councilmember addressed possible purchase, City Atty. Don Freeman immediately told the council that it would have to reconvene in public session.

Except for that brief suggestion, all discussion of the purchase was held in an open session.

In addition, the Gamble estate has been on the market for six weeks, not three years as reported.

Realtor Ben Heinrich had told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook that he had worked with the trust for three years. He was unclear on the amount of actual time the property had been on the market.

Carmel Valley riders win top honors at horse show

VETERAN RIDERS Patty and Terry Stumbaugh and a relative newcomer to the horse show circuit, Joanne Robbins, brought home to Carmel Valley a bundle of ribbons and seven show championships from the 131st Annual California State Fair Horse Show Sept. 13-16 in Sacramento.

All three train with Michelle Rush at Rushwood Riding School in Hidden Hills. Patty and Terry are the daughters of Dr. Susan Stumbaugh of Carmel Valley, and Joanne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Robbins of Carmel Valley.

Patty, riding her hunter Dragon Wings, not only made her debut in the junior hunter division but was named reserve show champion junior hunter age 14 and under, even though she rode in only five out of the seven qualifying rounds. She received two first and two seconds in junior hunter classes and placed second in the junior hunter stake for age 14 and under.

In the pony division, Terry, riding Mary's Bell, was named pony show champion for age 17 and under, while Patty, riding Mary's Mikado, received the reserve show championship. The girls won a total of seven first- and second-place ribbons and placed well in five other pony classes.

In the Welsh pony division, Terry showed Melody in G, who was the official Welsh pony of the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics. Terry received the show championship Welsh pony trophy and took reserve show championships for both mares in halter and western and English pleasure. She also won all the Welsh pony classes for English and western pleasure age 10 and under.

Patty received the show championship for hunt seat equitation age 11 and under after winning four firsts in hunt seat equitation and hunt seat equitation over fences. She also took firsts in children's jumpers age 14 and under and the open English pleasure stake age 14 and under and won 10 other ribbons.

Joanne Robbins moved from maiden up to novice as a result of show wins. Joanne, riding On My Honor, won the maiden equitation stake for age 12-14 and the novice English pleasure stake for age 14 and under.

She placed first in the maiden equitation class and in children's hunters age 12-14; took seconds in the novice hunt seat equitation stake age 12-14 and the novice English pleasure class age 14 and under; and received ribbons in nine other classes.

Other Rushwood riders who went to Sacramento only for the medal competitions at the close of the show included Denize Borges, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Borges of Carmel Valley; Amy Plomteaux, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Craig Hamilton of Carmel; Kelly Kurz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Kurz of Carmel Valley; and Kasey Owen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Owen of Pebble Beach.

Denize, riding Keep Smiling, placed second in the California Professional Horsemen's Association medal and received third in the F.E. Hart medal. Amy, riding her horse Keep Smiling, placed second in the American Horse Show Association medal.

Kelly, riding her horse Suspended Animation, placed fifth in the CPHA medal. Kasey, riding her horse Cover Time, was named reserve champion hunters under saddle age 15-17 and received a reserve in the NorCal medal competition.

Sanitary district work progresses

NO, THAT'S not a flying saucer that touched down in Carmel (above), but rather a new, 45-foot-wide steel roof for one of the digesters at the Carmel Sanitary District treatment plant just south of Carmel. The roof will be placed on the digester after removal of sludge has been completed. And work is about half-finished on a new influent pump station (below) which will obviate the need to discharge raw sewage into the Carmel River when heavy rains or flooding occur. Both are part of a $7 million plant improvement project to be completed in about a year. The prime contractor is Hoagland and Ar-tukovich. (Robert Miskimon photos).

NEWS OF STREET WORK

It is the intention of those who will protest against a concrete roadway on Ocean Avenue at the next trustee's meeting to ask immediate consideration of the plan, already presented, for a rock and gravel roadway. The demand for some sort of improvement on our main business street is very insistent and essential.

Property owners on Carmelq Avenue are circulating a petition to have their street improved in the same manner as the other streets now being done. It will be an advantage to do the work now, while the contractor, his men and machinery are here. Owners on other streets should bear this in mind.

Rock from the municipal quarries has been passing through the town all week on its way to the streets where it is being used. A considerable portion of Eighth Avenue is already covered. Take a walk and have a look at the work.

"MACON" VISITS US ON PRACTICE FLIGHT

Dropping airplanes and taking them back inside her long silver hull while on practice flight, the U.S. Navy dirigible "Macon" flew down the Carmel coastline and doubled back up it Wednesday noon in traffic-stopping manner.

Business was suspended, lunches got cold and necks became cramped as the town watched the most modern of air spectacles put on for its own private benefit.

Two of the five planes that live inside the super-balloon were lowered through the cross-shaped hatch beneath the body and swooped away to drift like gnats around the bulking craft and return slowly upward to contact the gripping mechanism and be raised once more through the floor of their lighter-than-air hangar.

For all of half an hour the spectacle continued, after which the "Macon" disappeared to the northward and Carmel returned to its mundane pursuits.

COASTAL GROUP REACHES POLICY DECISION

The Central Coast Regional Commission of the California Coastal Zone Conservation Commission has recommended that "every sand beach area and where no beach exists, the immediate shoreline below the limit of terrestrial vegetation" be declared a "public common."

The commission's policy recommendation is included in its recreation element, the fifth of nine "elements" to be presented to area residents through public hearings.

Also included is a recommendation that the state attorney general be delegated authority to enforce the public right to have access and use of the coastline and, when necessary, bring suit against private land owners on behalf of the public.

In the view of Lee Otter, a planner for the Central Coast Regional Office in Santa Cruz, the "public commons" concept is one of the most controversial policy recommendations presented by the commission to date. While it is neither new nor revolutionary (Florida, Texas and Hawaii have enacted similar legislation), it is a proposal that is bound to stir opposition among private owners of beach property.

CARMEL PREPARES LAWSUIT

The county has dropped "a bomb" on negotiations for a sewer connection agreement between the Carmel Sanitary District and Rancho Canada de la Segunda, Inc.

The county health department advised against spraying treated wastewater on a major portion of the Rancho Canada golf courses in Carmel Valley.

The ruling immediately stalled efforts between owner Nick Lombardo and the sanitary district to reach an agreement to dispose of treated wastewater on his golf courses in exchange for a sewer connection for Lombardo's proposed 175-room lodge.

The sewer connection was a condition required by the county board of supervisors in August when it approved the use permit for Lombardo's lodge project.

With the backing of the county health department, the supervisors stated that the lodge could not be built if Lombardo failed to secure an agreement with the sanitary district for sewage disposal service.

Stanley Worth, president of the Carmel Area Coalition, said last week that his organization is delaying its consideration of a lawsuit to halt the lodge plan until the negotiations are resolved.

But the Carmel City Council is moving ahead toward a decision to file a lawsuit. City Atty. George Brehmer said last Friday he will make a presentation to the council at its first or second meeting in October on the feasibility of a lawsuit against the county.

THE VALLEY SAGE

BY VICTORIA ANDREWS

School board 'grammar'

WHY DON'T our children speak so good? Between you and I, neither does the adults.

As reported in Michael Gardner's article on the school board in the Sept. 13 issue of this paper, board president Robert Fenton spoke thus: "This meeting was not unique to Jim Yates and I."

At the same meeting, trustee Doyle Clayton said: "I don't want to infer that there was ever a vote taken."

Mr. Fenton, between you and me, 'between you and I' isn't standard English. Mr. Clayton, what you infer I do not know, but what each of you implies through the language tangle is a need for a refresher course in grammar school.

Many teachers are not doing much better than the administrators. These custodians of our national brain trust — our children — often hand out assignment sheets rife with misspellings, syntactical errors, and creative or omisive punctuation.

One of the school forms which accompanied my eighth grader home on the first day of school was so illegible I wasn't sure whether it was illiterate or not; yet I was supposed to sign the form to show that I had read it. This missive was from a language teacher.

During a teaching walkabout in the out-back of high school academia, I once was given a note intended to excuse a student from a prior absence. The purported signator was a parent well-known for her writing ability. The message: "Please excuse Eric form (sic) English yesterday. He was sic." Sic.

I saved the note as an amusement to share with the other teachers. One of them — who taught grammar as though she had directives from God to diagram sentences — didn't understand what was funny. When we explained, she protested: "Oh, but my major was chemistry!"

As the district wages wars for wages, I suspect the taxpayers might be more sympathetic if Superintendent Rand's title were spelled correctly in communications from the district office.

Kale Smith of Carmel was among the first to respond to the call for Valley lore. A condensed version of his interview with a local elder is offered herewith as entertainment and as encouragement to others to record Valley legends.

Smith said he changed the names to protect the innocent — specifically himself.

"The old timer shifted his chew to the other cheek and spat a copious stream of tobacco juice on a rock. 'The Valley,' he said, 'ain't no Valley any more not like there used to be. You could drive your buggy down the Valley all day and not see two other people. If you did, most likely they were lost and asking directions."

"Nowadays you can hardly slow down on the Valley road, much less stop to visit, the Lord help you if you don't know where you're going, 'cause likely as not you'll get rear-ended by one of those race car drivers in their fancy foreign automobiles.

"I'm glad I live in town now. It's more peaceful here, less traffic, less noise than in the Valley. The Valley used to be the place a man went to get away to hunt pig or deer. Now the old lady goes there to shop.

"There used to be a stage that ran the Valley all the way to Tassajara, except in those days it was just called the Springs. They had a right nice resort there. You could stay two weeks if you wanted and take a kind of second honeymoon. Now there's nothing but bald-headed hippies down there.

"My son-in-law took his wife there. There was a fellow walking around buck naked who said he was praying...

"Last time we went to the Springs the team bolted for no reason at all, and the driver had a hell of a time stopping them. Finally he did, and this Chinaman got out, carrying a big carpetbag which was making a funny noise. One of the other passengers looked inside and screamed like a banshee. The carpetbag was chock full of rattlesnakes.

"I don't know how the team knew he had the snakes. We never knew why he had them. We left him there with his rattlesnakes.

"Old man Jones (not his real name) had a still up in the caves and brewed the best squeezings a man could drink. A wilder man I never knew.

"He was married to the prettiest girl. She looked about 19, but they had six kids. Two of them weren't right in the head.

"One day she ran off with a city fellow, and took Jones' best dog. Everyone laughed about that, but not in front of Jones, for he was likely to blow your head off. He was a little touched himself, but he sure could make whiskey.

"Wonder what ever happened to the Joneses. They're probably driving around in those fancy cars now, building ghost condos and roads to nowhere. The Valley isn't the Valley any more."

The Carmel Valley Gem and Mineral Society will present its annual gem and mineral show and sale at the Monterey Fairgrounds on Sept. 29-30. The "silver gemiversary" is the theme selected for the show by the society which began 25 years ago.

The society has furnished several scholarships for the study of geology, mineralogy and other earth sciences.

In addition to the exhibits of gems and minerals, there will be demonstrations in silver engraving, steam casting, arrow chip-pin and the cutting, polishing and faceting of gem stones.

The displays will be open from 1 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturday and from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Sunday. The admission fee is $1.50.

CARMEL VALLEY PERSPECTIVE

Report details effects of COMSAT expansion

By ROBERT MISKIMON

INCREASED microwave radiation levels and negative impacts on the landscape would result from expansion of the Communications Satellite Corp. (COMSAT) earth station in Cachagua, according to a draft environmental impact report.

Other adverse impacts from the project would include increased ground water runoff, increased demand for electricity, temporary traffic hazards and greater demand for fire and police services, according to the EIR.

COMSAT has asked the Monterey County Planning Commission for a use permit to add as many as five more parabolic "dish" antennas to its earth satellite station, located about 12 miles south of Carmel Valley Road.

The new antennas would be added over a 10-year period to the existing 97-foot-high antenna; total station area would be expanded to 25,000 sq. ft.; a 1,200-foot extension would be added to an access road.

COMSAT wants to add a 105-foot antenna, a 62-foot antenna and three 45-foot antennas to improve communications with new and more sensitive satellites now under development.

The earth station is the major telecommunications link between North America and Asia. It sends and receives messages through a satellite in geosynchronous orbit 22,240 feet above the earth.

The draft environmental impact report — prepared by Environmental Science Associates of Foster City — will be subject to public review and comment until Oct. 1, according to county planning staffer Janet Brennan.

The county planning commission tentatively is scheduled to consider certification of the EIR at its Oct. 31 meeting. It is possible the commission could also vote on the use permit application then, Mrs. Brennan told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

After the public review period had closed, comments on the EIR will be forwarded to the consultant to be included in the final version of the document, she added.

These "significant physical environment impacts" are outlined in the draft EIR:

- Removal of oak trees inconsistent with county planning objectives.
- Access road extension would cross an intermittent stream and could be damaged during heavy rains.
- Concentration of the industrial character of the site and increase of development visible from Cachagua Road.
- Increase in ambient noise levels during construction.

EARTH STATION at Jamesburg includes this single, 97-foot parabolic antenna, which provides the major telecommunications link between North America and Asia. If the county planning commission approves a use permit requested by COMSAT, as many as five additional "dish" antennas could be installed at the earth station in the next decade.

- New mechanical equipment included in the project could increase neighborhood noise levels.

- Bridges and culverts along access roads to the site may not support trucks loaded with construction materials and equipment.

- Over-width loads could increase congestion at bridges and narrow sections of roadway during construction.

- Increase in microwave radiation levels in Cachagua Valley.

Members of the Concerned Citizens of Cachagua last spring expressed fears that COMSAT had dumped polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) at the earth station. However, Monterey County Environmental Sanitarian Walter Wong checked and found no traces of PCBs.

"The existing service entrance transformer and high power amplifier contain PCB coolants," according to the draft EIR. "COMSAT recognizes the hazards posed by PCBs. All PCB-contaminated equipment and liquids will be removed from the site by the end of 1984. The contaminated equipment will be replaced with new equipment containing dry-type, air-cooled components."

Different nations have adopted different "safe" levels of microwave radiation pertaining to human health, according to the draft EIR. The Russian standard, for instance, is much lower than the level considered acceptable in the United States.

Although some research into microwave radiation has documented adverse effects on humans at certain frequency levels, "at the approximate operating frequency of the existing earth station antenna, microwave radiation has fewer biological effects," according to the document.

"Birds may be more subject to risk than terrestrial animals. During flight in the vicinity of the antenna, even though exposure is for short periods, birds may be exposed to relatively high radiation levels."

Earth station to have open house

COMSAT, The Communications Satellite Corp., has announced plans to hold daily open houses at its Jamesburg Earth Station during National High Technology Week. The COMSAT facility is located on Cachagua Road in Upper Carmel Valley.

The facility will be open Monday through Saturday, Oct. 1 through 6, from 2 to 4 p.m. Visitors are encouraged to arrive for the tour at 2 p.m. The open houses will be in addition to the regularly scheduled tours held each Wednesday at the telecommunications center.

Introduced this year by the Congressional Caucus for Science and Technology, High Tech week is designed to inform the public of the way technological advances have contributed to our welfare and, in particular, to the nation's success in the world economy.

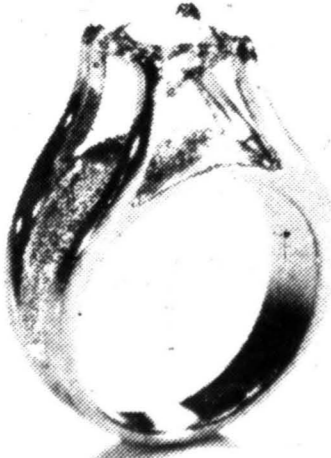

Colleges and businesses across the country are slated to participate, and many will gear programs toward young people and career opportunities in new industries generated by emerging technologies.

"High Tech Week gives us a chance to learn about some of the technological advances that make our lives easier," said A.J. Stotler, director of the COMSAT Jamesburg Earth Station. "I think people will be pleasantly surprised and proud of COMSAT's contribution to worldwide communications."

The Jamesburg Earth Station is the major U.S. station for international satellite telecommunications in the Pacific Ocean region. It processes, transmits and receives commercial signals to and from a satellite that hovers about 22,000 miles over the mid-Pacific in geostationary orbit.

The tours will be open to the public free of charge. For further information regarding group tours or directions, call 659-2293 weekdays between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Trustees will discuss goals

What is the goal of Carmel schools in 1984-85?

That's the question the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education is to address in a special study session Friday, Oct. 5.

The session will begin at 4 p.m. in the Carmel Middle School library, south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

Trustees scheduled the study session after a brief discussion of the goals at their Sept. 24 meeting.

Supt. William Rand has provided trustees with "five major goals" the board may want to review at the study session.

The administration proposes that the number one priority should be to "continue to improve the quality of education."

As part of that goal, Rand recommends that the district "plan activities to address staff development, supervision and evaluation procedures, morale, instructional time and other factors that influence instruction."

A second goal is to "continue to clarify and specify district curricula."

As part of that goal, Rand recommends that the district "review and revise (the) curriculum development process, re-evaluate and specify roles of administrators, teachers, department heads and mentors."

The superintendent believes the number two priority also should include a statement that the district emphasis in 1984-85 will be on improved foreign language, art and music programs.

Another goal of the district should be to get its "marketing" plan underway. Rand presented a marketing report to the board at its Sept. 6 session.

The program is designed to publicize school programs and promote better cooperation between the district and community.

Other goal topics include: improved transportation and grounds maintenance programs, and the continued progress of the Project 2000 concept.

In other action Sept. 24, trustees heard requests to settle a contract dispute with the Association of Carmel Teachers.

Trustees have offered a 1 percent pay hike to the teachers.

Teachers have not specified how much of a salary hike they want. The staff also complains about other provisions in the board proposal, including a plan to require teachers to be at school during specific times.

Several teachers have publicly denounced that provision. Teachers say the time clock idea is an affront to their professional dignity.

And, they say many teachers arrive at school before the appointed time and stay later. A time clock approach merely would lead teachers to come to school later and leave earlier than they do now, critics say.

At the meeting, ACT negotiator Jack Ellena asked the board to speed contract negotiations. "We're eager to sit down any time," he said.

The Carmel High School Site Council has voted unanimously to ask the board to settle the contract dispute soon, according to a statement read by member Greg Guzaitis, who also is the Associated Student Body president.

Teachers have voted not to attend any back-to-school nights until the contract is settled. The vote has necessitated the postponement of all back-to-school nights in the district.

Rand has said he will try to arrange a negotiating session before the next one that is scheduled for Oct. 2.

In another matter, trustees postponed action on hiring a consultant to help improve communication between board members and between trustees and Rand.

The delay was sought to give trustees an opportunity to review all applicants and weigh the cost of the consultant.

The consultant was sought after an uproar when trustees openly criticized each other. There have been allegations — mostly by trustee Pat Condon — that Fenton and Trustee Jim Yates secretly met and tried to have Supt. Rand fired.

Fenton has admitted to meeting with Rand and Yates, but the discussion topics have not been revealed.

The board also heard several complaints from Cachagua residents that they did not know the district had planned to impose a $25 per student busing fee.

The parents said the board should have done a better job notifying them. The fee proposal had been reported in newspapers.

However, since the action was taken in the summer, the board was unable to send notices of the proposal home with students.

The board did not take any action on the complaints.

Trustees also appointed Susie Faia as their representative to the Carmel Youth Center Board of Directors.

Parent support group meets

A parent support group will meet from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. each Wednesday at the Carmel Presbyterian Church. For more information, call Joetta Duncan at 624-4299.

Food for thought

ONE THING that restaurateur and artist Faud Bahou wants to make clear about Chutneys, his new gourmet cafe located in The Crossroads, is that it does not serve Indian food.

"Some people think it is Indian because of the name," he said. While Bahou does cook some dishes with the more exotic spices, the restaurant offers "gourmet burgers, salads, unusual chicken dishes, a few vegetarian meals, pasta, steak, sandwiches, cheesecake and much more." He does not rely on pre-cooked meals and likes to refer to his cooking as spontaneous — which does not mean unplanned.

The name Chutneys comes from the unusual relishes the British developed in India, and which Bahou makes and sells in his restaurant.

"When the British were in India, they found that they could not eat the food," he explained. "So they pickled it." This pickling is much different than the pickling Americans are used to and tastes more like home canned preserves than pickles.

The flavors reflect this difference with names like papaya-prune, hazelnut-rum-raisin, peach-cashew, and tomato-scalloped. Bahou uses these unique flavors for some of his dishes and hopes to market the relishes in stores.

This is not a first-time venture in restauranting for Bahou. He and his brother owned and operated five such restaurants in Tennessee while he taught art and pursued his own painting. The professions are closely associated for him.

Organic matter is the ultimate art form," he said. "Having a kitchen, really, is just like having a studio.

"Food becomes a medium for expression. It deals with all elements of art: color, shape, form. It has the added privilege of dealing with people."

Bahou's partner this time around is not his brother but graphic artist Debbi Corlew, whom he met in Tennessee and has been friends with since. Debbie is in charge of the marketing and designed the graceful menu.

"I don't like to waste food," Bahou said. "So there are two sections on the luncheon menu. One section offers the same foods but at smaller portions and lower prices. This menu is available for dinner also.

A specialty of the house is cheesecake, which Chutneys offers in nine varieties along with other desserts. Bahou is interested in developing a "cheesecake cone," like the ice cream cone, which he wants to call Bliss Kiss.

Bahou is still involved with his painting which he describes as serial expressionist and is "much too emotional to hang in a restaurant." He is also researching and writing two unusual cookbooks, one of which investigates the relationship between Middle Eastern cuisine and architecture.

"An example is the dome shapes found frequently in Middle Eastern cooking which reflect the domed mosques that are prevalent in the area," he said. "Or that there are so many stuffed dishes in their cooking, intricately carved vegetables or stuffed grape leaves.

"Their mysterious and hidden interiors are reminiscent of mystery of the shops filled with unknown merchandise that you see in the bazaars," he said. Geography is the reason the food and architecture develop the way it does in a given area, he believes.

His other cookbook is for "the experimental gourmet," and combines the various foods and ingredients from all over the world in "new and different ways."

"It is probably only for the adventurous," he said.

Along with the dishes cooked and served, there will be a variety of gourmet foods such as condiments, dried fruits, nuts, candies, and desserts for sale. All menu items are available for take out and Chutneys will do catering and party trays.

THE CAR! THE CAR!

BETTER THE SECOND TIME AROUND?

When Rand Van Sant Ward decided to start her own counseling service in Carmel, she knew what she wanted to specialize in — problems encountered in remarriage. It is an area that Ms. Ward feels needs much closer attention and special training.

With the exception of those who have been hermits for the last two decades, there is probably no one in the United States who is not either involved in, knows someone in, or has the in the family a remarriage.

According to the last census, 40 percent of all marriages end in divorce and of those who divorce, 80 percent will remarry. Ms. Ward feels the problems within these relationships are unique from the problems within a first marriage, especially when there are children involved.

It is a situation Ms. Ward knows well. She was involved in a second marriage for 15 years — a marriage that included a total of 14 children between the "yours, mine and ours."

"We were a little naive when we started," she said.

After trying to fit herself and her family into the classic family mold that only seemed to make matters more difficult, she thought she was "going crazy."

The problems she and her husband encountered finally led to the end of the marriage two years ago, but Ms. Ward feels she learned a great deal from the experience.

"I see the mistakes we made. Both my ex-husband and I tried very hard and were very committed, but we just didn't know enough about the special pressures in a remarriage," she said.

The research Ms. Ward conducted for her masters degree in psychology at Southern Oregon State College reinforced her feelings about these special problems. In a remarriage, husband, wife and children can have different "agendas" or priorities. Children are still dealing with past losses, the husband may "just want to get on with it and make it work," and the wife can be miserable because she can not do the role she wants as wife and mother.

Both husband and wife may feel they are put second to the children. In her research, Ms. Ward found that the classic problems listed by first-time married couples are money first, children second. For remarried couples, the children are listed first and money second. Even so, the economics take on a new dimension because the partners may resent the money going out to commitments made in prior marriages.

Other members of the family can get help too. Grandparents may be confused about their roles.

"I can help them understand where they fit into the extended family and the resistance they may be meeting from other family members."

Since one-third of all children experience divorce, "it is important that they understand it is O.K. to do 'secondary bonding' to the stepparent and that the blood bonds are unshakable."

Another unique feature of Ms. Ward's counseling is that she will go to the client's home.

"It is more relaxing for the family, and I can get a better feel for the situation," she said. There is also an office available for clients who prefer to meet there.

Ms. Ward taught psychology and was involved with group, peer and student counseling at Southern Oregon State where she received her M.A. in 1978. She also holds an M.S. in nursing and is currently working as an intensive care charge nurse at Watsonville General Hospital.

Starting Oct. 2, she will conduct a workshop in stepparenting, called "Instep," through Quest, an arm of Monterey Peninsula College. Ms. Ward gives talks to faculties and community groups on the extended family and its special problems.

CARMEL EPICUREAN CLOSES DOORS

After only two months in operation, the Carmel Epicurean on the corner of Dolores Street and Seventh Avenue has closed its doors. The closing was a "heartbreaking experience" for owners Allan and Susan Keleman, who had bought the former Moulin de Carmel. The business has reverted to its original owners who, Kelemen believes, will try to sell it as a non-existing business.

"We tried so hard and put in hundreds and hundreds of hours," Allan said. Of all the businesses he has been involved with, he found the restaurant to be the "hardest."

"It is consuming," he said. "We couldn't seem to catch the night crowd. We had a great lunch crowd — some people would come in three and four times a week — and rave reviews on the food, but the $4 and $5 lunches couldn't make up for the lack of a dinner crowd."

He had been told by some that it was a bad corner for dinner because "people don't come this way at night except to the established restaurants."

A high overhead and unforeseen complications contributed to their problems. They had to do a lot of work to get the restaurant up to code and in operating condition.

"You need at least one year's worth of capital to make it. We had money going in but it's hard, it's really hard," he said.

Despite this misfortune, they remain optimistic about their future.

"We will start again with something else," he said.

NEW ACCOUNTANT IN TOWN

There is a new accountant in town. Marilyn Blankenship has moved her accounting services from Pacific Grove to west Mission Street between Fourth and Fifth avenues. Marilyn has been a certified public accountant since 1980 and has lived on the peninsula for four years. She received her accounting degree from San Jose State University in 1978.

She offers tax planning, tax returns for all entities, bookkeeping services and financial statements.

"Anything a CPA does, I do," she told the Carmel Business License and Code Review Board.

A native of Northern California, Marilyn likes to snow ski and do country western dancing in Monterey. She is on the board of directors for the Buddy Program, an organization much like Big Brothers and Sisters, and has started a group patterned after a gentler version of the Tough Love program that helps parents learn to cope with their teenagers. Marilyn is the mother of two children herself.

WAY TO GO, LAURA!

There were congratulations from all when Laura Hamilton, advertising layout artist for the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook was notified of a first place award for her 1984 Spring Fashion Supplement cover of the Pine Cone/Outlook and Monterey Peninsula Review.

Design Service, Inc. awarded Laura the first place prize for a "creative, unique layout" which pictured a woman's head and hat surrounded by an unusual border done in varied intensities of red and black creating "striking color variations."

The winning design is featured in the October issue of Tearsheet, Design Service's monthly magazine. Entries in the competition were sent in from all over the country. Laura, a 10-year resident of Carmel, has been with the Pine Cone/Outlook for a year and one-half and has worked as a layout artist for 16 years. This is her second award for her layouts from Design Service.

SPIRULINA: THE FOOD OF THE FUTURE IS HERE NOW.

Spirulina Plankton is the most basic substance in the whole food chain... Spirulina's high-quality protein contains 18 of 22 amino acids required for health — and all eight essential amino acids in the correct proportion. Protein such as this is rarely found in non-animal sources, so Spirulina is popular with vegetarians. And Spirulina's protein, which provides sustaining energy to the human body, is up to 95 percent, digestible as compared with beef's 20 percent. Several kinds of unusual proteins called biliproteins which occur naturally in our own bodies are found in Spirulina. Spirulina is low in calories, fats and sodium and amazingly high in efficient proteins (containing 60 to 71 percent) and all the cell salts and enzymes for body metabolism.

HEIDI NICHOLSEN RETURNS FROM EUROPE

Heidi NicholSEN of Carmel Valley returned in August from a five-week tour of Germany and Switzerland, as one of 14 California 4-H foreign exchange students sponsored by the Youth Foreign Exchange.

Heidi, a Carmel High School senior, was accompanied on the tour by Heidy Tigerald of Salinas. She is the daughter of Judy NicholSEN and the sister of Fawn NicholSEN.

All of the 4-H members were guests in the homes of German families. Heidi, however, was the guest of two host families. For half of her tour, she stayed in Lurch with the Muller family; she also spent four days in Welzheim with the Strohmaier family.

Highlights of her tour in Germany were the Hohenzollern castle — which Heidi said was her favorite spot in Germany — attending a horse baptism, a harvest party, and attending school with one of her host sisters, Sabrina.

While in Switzerland, Heidi and the other 4-H members stayed in youth hostels and toured several castles, including the King Ludwig II Neuschwanstein castle.

They lunched at the foot of the Eiger and Monch mountains. In Bern, Switzerland, the bear pits were a major attraction. In Luzern, the 4-H students saw the covered bridge and shopped. Heidi bought several music boxes in Brienz, a town famous for its wood carvings.

TOR HOUSE FESTIVAL OCT. 6-7

The public is invited to participate in seminars, readings, and tours as part of the sixth annual Robinson Jeffers Tor House Festival Oct. 6-7 in Carmel.

Further information may be obtained by contacting the Tor House Foundation at 624-1813.

SANTA CATALINA WINE TASTING

Santa Catalina School in Monterey will have a wine tasting and auction Saturday, Oct. 13, at Bertrand Hall on the school campus. Wine tasting is at 4:30 p.m. and the auction from 7 to 9 p.m.

David Armanasco of Durney Vineyard in Cachagua will act as master of ceremonies and auctioneer. A drawing will be conducted for a trip for two to Hawaii or Aspen, including lodging.

A special auction item will be a private tour of a vineyard in Burgundy, France.

UNA GARDEN PARTY

Rev. Howard Matson of Carmel Valley was one of the featured speakers at the garden party for members and friends of the United Nations Association (UNA) at the home of Dorothy Atkinson in Monterey Sept. 20. Mrs. Atkinson was one of the founding members of the Monterey Bay chapter.

"Building Bridges" was the theme of the party, and Matson emphasized the part people-to-people contacts play in reducing tensions with the USSR. Prof. Wilhelm Weber of Carmel, UNA past president whose Monterey Institute of International Studies pupils provided translation services to the Olympic Games in Los Angeles this summer, expressed pleasure that so many contacts were made with more than 140 countries.

Charlotte (Mrs. Howard) Clark, UNA past president emeritus, explored the military-industrial complex as contributing to the nuclear arms race. Speaking on behalf of Bridges Worldwide, a new organization that seeks to promote exchange programs with the USSR, was Dr. Thor Krogh of Monterey.

Karin Strasser Kauffman will lead a study group on "Women in the Future," and Virginia Stanton will be chairwoman of the 40th U.N. anniversary next year, according to Prof. Robert von Pagenhardt of Carmel Valley.

Helene Boughton of Carmel Valley, UNA past president emeritus, was chairwoman of the party.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Is senility an inevitable consequence of advanced age? Not at all. The recent attention to Alzheimer's disease and other conditions which can cause the symptom of senility has led some people to wrongly believe that the majority of older citizens are affected. Research at the University of California indicates that the intellectual functioning of the vast majority of people remains intact in old age. Serious intellectual impairment of those over 75 are seriously affected.

As he celebrated more than a half century in show business, comedian Henny Youngman told interviewers that he had absolutely no plans for retirement. At 77, Henny was still delivering his jokes to 200 audiences a year, a back-breaking schedule for any performer. "Retire to what?" laughed Henny. "I don't play golf. I don't play tennis. And I think I'm better now than I ever was!"

Remember When? September 6, 1954—President Eisenhower broke ground electronically from Denver for the first atomic power plant in the United States, to be built for the Duquesne Power Co. at Pittsburgh.

SERRA BICENTENNIAL

BY MSGR. FRANCESWEBER

Mexico City

THE CAMINO REAL, which connected Vera Cruz with Mexico City, stretched from sea level to an altitude of 7,382 feet, through tropical country, arid plains, high plateaus, across formidable sierras, in view of volcanoes and lakes, perennial snow and abundant sunshine.

Though horses were available for the journey, Fray Junipero Serra and a companion from Andalusia decided to walk to Mexico City. In so doing, Serra identified with the frailes andariegos (the walking friars) who were famous in the New World.

The two friars began their journey without money or guide. Their breviaries were their sole possessions. They knew they could rely on the native Indian and Spanish hospitality which was still the unwritten law of the land.

Walking between 15 and 20 miles each day, the missionaries set out after Mass. They took a siesta at midday when the sun was warm and the travel most weary. Their lodging and food was sought por amor de Dios (for the love of God). New geography lessons and whole chapters of nomenclature and practical Christian charity were to be learned all along the way.

During the trek, Serra's leg became swollen and he was plagued with a burning itch. He attributed the swelling to a mosquito bite, though it may have been inflicted by a chigger common to that area and other tropical regions. It was a wound that would plague him the rest of his life, at times causing critical pain.

Though he left no record of his first impressions of America as he trudged along El Camino Real, Serra certainly saw and experienced much that was new and different from Mallorca.

He passed lush vegetation and semiarid plains; incipient as well as spent volcanoes; fierce-looking lava deposits; marshes and formidable river torrents; magnificent, towering mountains; strange-looking people in ponchos and guaraches; primitive, lonely shacks and terrible roads.

And socially he was in another world. Though it had the unmistakable Spanish impress upon it, it was primarily Indian territory. It was New Spain where nature took on magnitude.

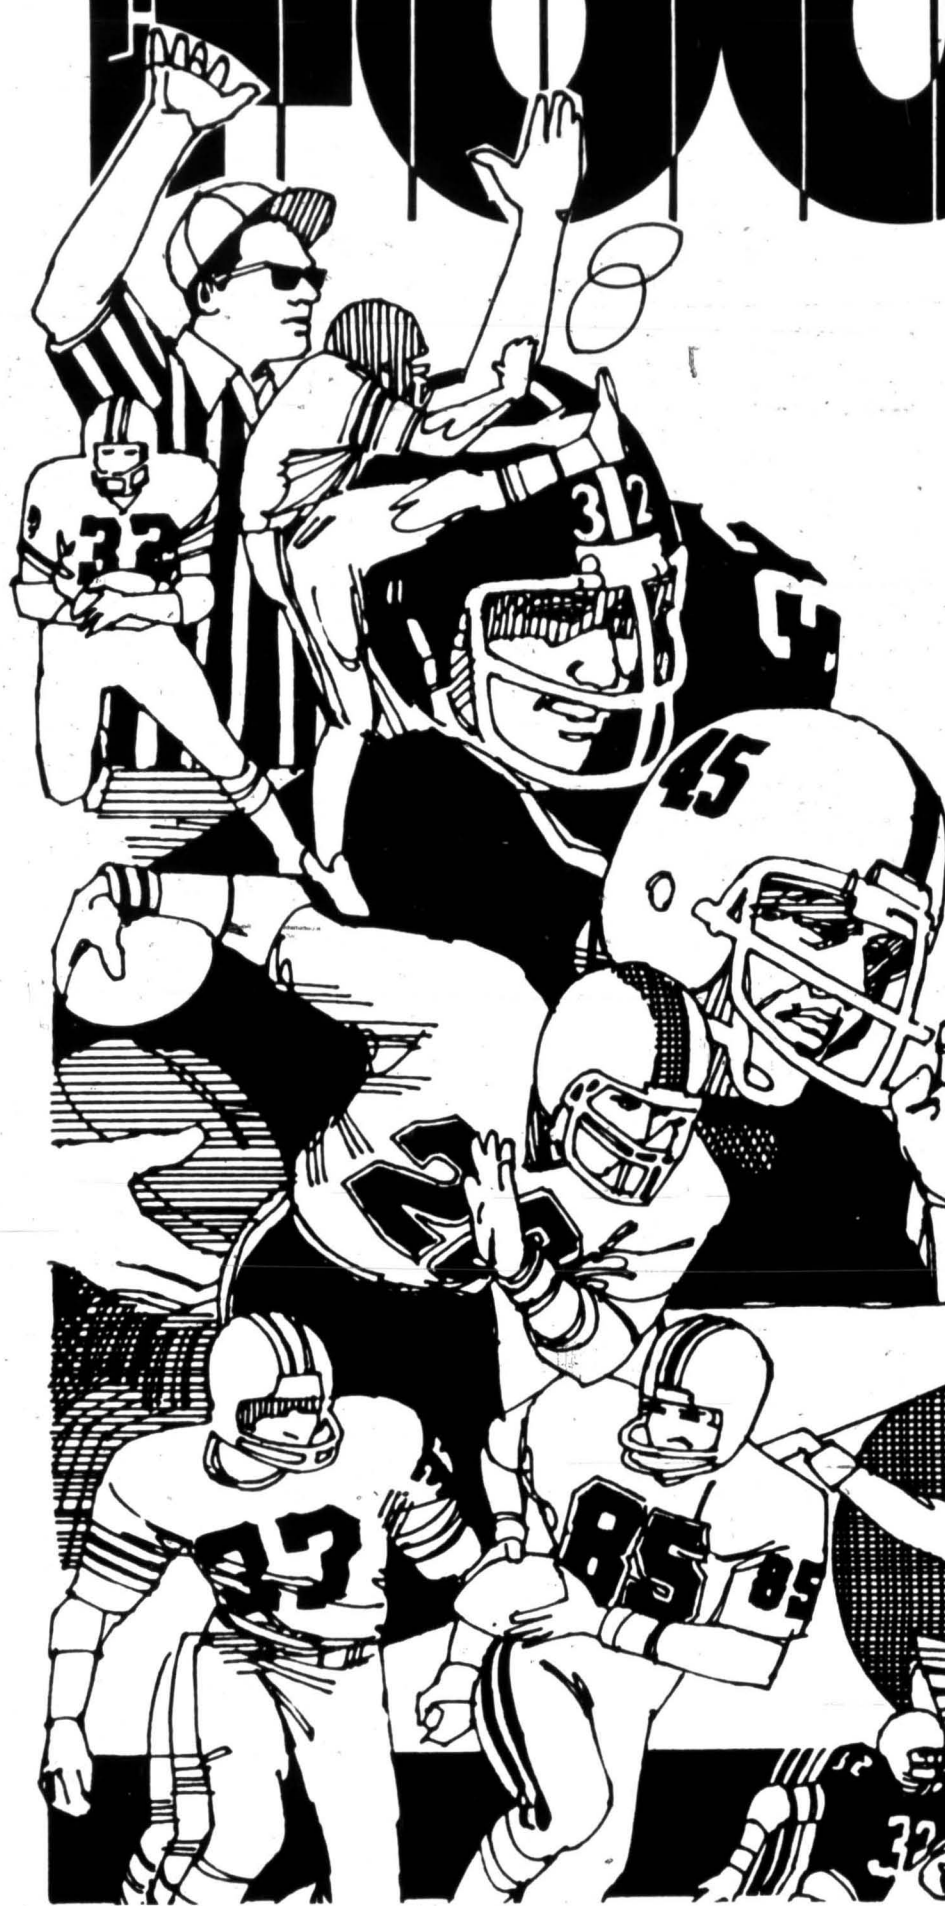

With new vision and high hopes, Fray Junipero Serra came hobbling painfully into Mexico City, his new home. He arrived at the shrine of Our Lady of Guadalupe, the religious hearth of Mexico, on the evening of Dec. 31 and there he remained overnight with prayers of gratitude.

Serra arrived at San Fernando College on New Year's day. He had traveled from Bon Any in Mallorca to the hill of Tepeyac in Mexico, the chain of his travels links two sacred hills dedicated to the Madonna he loved and revered. He was now 6,000 miles from home.

San Fernando was one of the leading apostolic colleges in the New World whose purpose was the formation of able missionaries. It was an independent, specialized institution within the framework of the Franciscan Order where friars were trained for the apostolate of the home missions and the unconverted Indian field.

Sunset announces lively arts season

By ANNE PAPINEAU

ROD PUPPETS, Irish folk singers and Joan Fontaine — "a diversity of performers" in the words of the Sunset Center director — will showcase their talents in Carmel's cathedral-domed theater this season.

The Lively Arts Series begins its fourth year Sunday, Sept. 30, with a performance by Theatre Sans Fil, the "no strings attached" giant puppet company that proved a sell-out at the Olympic Arts Festival.

On the threshold of a new Lively Arts season, Sunset Center Director Richard Tyler already contemplates a cornucopia of acts for 1985-86. But these will appear in Carmel only if audience support increases during the current season.

"We need a rededication of our audience in the Lively Arts Series," Tyler said from his Sunset Center office beneath the unblinking do a master class at UCSC. Their students will then come here to see the next performance."

Alvin Ailey Ensemble will present two very different programs at Sunset Theater to highlight the troupe's versatility. It will perform public taste and schedule shows that appeal to the Sunset Center audience, which he characterizes as "a wonderful cross-section of the entire peninsula."

But the center draws from beyond the Monterey Peninsula as well. So far this year ticket requests for the Festival of Dance have arrived from Watsonville, King City and "six from Livermore."

"I try to pick things that are very unique and have a special kind of meaning in performance or have public appeal," Tyler explained. "I think The Hobbit falls into the first category. Joan Fontaine and the Chieftains are in the second."

"I'm working on next year's schedule now — if the audience wants the Lively Arts Series. I'm looking at things like Rita Moreno who is coming up with a show; the people who did Gertrude Stein are doing a show on Zelda Fitzgerald; Della Reese may present Blues in the Night. John Houseman's acting company will be touring, if we can afford that ... that will only happen if we have an audience that wants it."

The 733-seat Sunset Theater, located in the center of the facility on San Carlos Street at Ninth Avenue, prohibits booking of certain acts. The stage is not large enough for such major troupes as American Ballet Theatre or the San Francisco Ballet.

"There are three people I could get — they really want to come here — except the house gaze of a wall of signed celebrity portraits. "The Dance Festival in 11 years has brought some of the biggest names in the dance world. It is doing all right."

"Approximately half the house is sold through subscriptions (to the dance series)," Tyler explained. But regarding advance ticket sales for the Lively Arts Series, he responded: "Uh-uh, don't ask."

"Theatre Sans Fil was a sell-out attraction at the Summer Olympic Games," Tyler said, a stack of gushing "Sans Fil" reviews before him. "These puppets are larger than people. The Hobbit is an adult fantasy you won't see elsewhere. And they're not selling. It's embarrassing how empty that theater is."

Individual tickets for Lively Arts Series events are priced at $7.75 to $10. Patrons receive a discount if they purchase the three-show series in advance. Also in the series, "An Evening with Joan Fontaine" will be presented Saturday, Feb. 2, 1985. The Academy Award-winning actress and Carmel Highlands resident will discuss Hollywood's "Golden Age." Her talk will be peppered with vintage film clips.

"When you bring in a program of this caliber that has to pay for itself, costs have to be met through ticket sales," the director said. "The program is totally predicated on public appeal, or it will cease to exist. There are no sources of donations."

THE PROGRAM receives approximately $40,000 from the City of Carmel, Tyler said. It opened in 1980 with a staging of Pat Carroll's one-woman show, Gertrude Stein, Gertrude Stein, Gertrude Stein.

"We have not raised our prices in three years, hoping more ticket sales will cover the cost — although prices of acts have gone up," he added.

The Festival of Dance, which opens Nov. 14, navigates much smoother financial waters. On that date Jose Molina Bailes Espanoles, an authentic Flamenco troupe that features live guitar music, will make its third Sunset Theater performance in 12 years.

"This year we will have a very special relationship with the University of California at Santa Cruz," Tyler noted. "Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble will appear here, then Returning March 16, 1985, after a three-year absence will be the Khadra International Folk Ballet. Attired in folk costumes and performing a variety of ethnic dances, including Eastern European, British and American, the Khadra ensemble is one of the few to present Russian-style male toe dancing.

On Jan. 15, 1985, Sunset audiences will be able to see the North Carolina Dance Theater in its first West Coast tour. The ensemble combines classical elegance and offbeat humor, in pieces choreographed by such dance giants as Balanchine.

Individual tickets to the Festival of Dance range from $7.75 to $10. Series prices are $28 to $32. For both arts series, patrons may make a student-support donation. By donating the cost of seating, local theater, dance and music students will receive free tickets to these performances.

just isn't big enough," Tyler pointed out. Those three are Cary Grant, Burl Ives and Victor Borge.

Whether the Lively Arts Series survives in Carmel hinges upon the success of the 1984-85 season, the director affirmed.

"If it doesn't do well this year, I'll find it very difficult to continue it. It's done for the public."

Mission fiesta honors Fray Junipero Serra

FATHER Junipero Serra will be honored at the mission he founded in 1771 during the Carmel Mission Fiesta Sunday, Sept. 30.

A chicken barbecue with all the trimmings, sale booths and continuous entertainment mark the day, celebrated intermittently since the founding of the mission where Father Serra died 200 years ago.

The fiesta begins after 11 a.m. Mass. A procession in the mission courtyard celebrates the patron saint of the mission, San Carlos Borromeo. Following the procession, visitors are invited to explore a variety of arts and crafts displayed by 60 artisans. Their work is presented under the direction of Bruna Odello.

Mariachi music will be performed by El Mariachi Mixtlan de la Bahia de Monterey. Father Jose Rojas' Penny Club of Watsonville will present dances by 30 boys and girls.

From noon to 5 p.m., John Robotti and his crew will serve barbecued chicken dinners. The dinners, priced at $5, include beans, salsa, salad and dessert. Other food booths will serve tacos, burritos, cotton candy, beverages and other items.

The annual fiesta benefits Carmel Mission charities. For more information, call 624-1271.

A CARMEL MISSION fiesta of the 1920s is captured in this Lewis Josselyn photograph honored at the spirited event, scheduled Sunday, Sept. 30, in the mission courtyard.

AT THE CHERRY FOUNDATION

BY JANE WILGRESS

Foundation offers course

"THE CABALA: its origin and function" will be the title of a new course to be offered at Cherry Foundation, starting Wednesday, Oct. 3.

Sessions will be conducted in the gallery at 7:30 p.m. This course will be conducted by Father Charles Moore, priest, scholar and attorney. "Father Charlie" is well known in this area for his scholarship and liveliness as a teacher.

A fee, payable in advance, will be charged. There will be a maximum enrollment of 15 people. To reserve a place, please call us at 624-7491.

The cabala is described by Father Charlie as "The yoga of the west, as it comes to us through the revelation of Israel."

From the field of scholarship to that of recycling — our big event of the week will be a giant rummage sale in and around Cherry Hall Saturday, Sept. 29, and Sunday, Sept. 30.

The sale will open at 10 a.m. and run until 4 p.m. Sunday hours will be 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Browsing through our still-accumulating merchandise, I see fine lamps, two TVs, light furniture, interesting pictures, good clothes and shoes, linens and blankets, a guitar, two steel-belted radial tires, a hibachi, toys — in short, all the "good goods" that make up a super recycling sale full of bargains. So come and browse — and buy!

You call this 'Living Together?'

JARION MONROE (left) is Tom and Dana Kelly plays Reg in the Alan Ayckbourn comedy Living Together. One of a trilogy of comedies, Living Together opens with a champagne reception at 8 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 30. Champagne receptions for the other Ayckbourn comedies will be at 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 28 and Saturday, Sept. 29. (Chuck Scardina photograph).

ON STAGE

The Norman Conquests

Champagne openings are scheduled this week for the California Repertory Theatre productions of The Norman Conquests. The Norman Conquests is a trio of comedies by Alan Ayckbourn. Each show pictures present-day Brits striving to keep up a show of manners — while they battle for each other's affections. Though each of the shows is complete in itself, the shows are constructed as a trilogy that can be seen in any order.

Round and Round the Garden opens at 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 28. It will also be staged at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 2. Table Manners opens at 8 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 29. Living Together will preview at 8 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 27. It will have a champagne opening at 8 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 30. Additional performances of Living Together are planned at 2 and 8 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 3.

Preview price is $7.50. A 15-percent discount will be given to those who purchase all three shows in advance. Champagne opening tickets are $17.50. Regular ticket prices are $9 to $13.

California Repertory Theatre is at 125 Ocean View Blvd., off Cannery Row in the American Tin Cannery Building, Pacific Grove. Tickets: 372-4373.

Medea

The Outdoor Forest Theater offers Robinson Jeffers' accessible rendering of Euripides' Medea in a production flawlessly directed by Nick Zanides. Rosamond Goodrich's title performance is perfectly controlled and rich in nuance and supported by a well-rehearsed cast. The theater's unique setting and Oronzo Abbatecola's set design add still more to

The Au Pair Man

A rough Irish bill collector named Hartigan is conscripted into the service of an English lady, Elizabeth, in this comedy at the Studio Theatre Restaurant.

Starring Jim Webber and Nita Raichart, The Au Pair Man offers a kind of reverse Pygmalion plot in that the lady tries to teach her helper how to be a gentleman.

The comedy concludes its run this week, playing Thursday through Saturday, Sept. 27-29.

Dinner is served at 7 p.m. and curtain is at 8:30 p.m. Price for dinner and show is $22.50. The Studio Theatre Restaurant is on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, Carmel. Tickets: 624-1661.

Adult actors' workshop begins

"Developing the Actor's Presence," a series of working sessions for adult actors, will be taught from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Indoor Forest Theater in Carmel. The course runs Oct. 2 through Nov. 20.

The class will present ways to enlarge each actor's control of the self and character through a variety of physical systems. Class size is limited to 10. Instructors are Marcia Gambrell Hovick, Michael Purcell, Catherine Goldman and Loel Shuler, under the sponsorship of Staff Players Repertory Company.

For registration information, call 624-1531.

Feiffer's People

Jules Feiffer's comic insights into modern life are presented with wit and verve by the Monterey Peninsula College Players. Briskly directed by Carey Kettner, the eight-person cast enacts 20 vignettes that comment on relationships and current values. Standout performances by Diana Crockett, Roger Henderson and Arlen Sanders highlight this sprightly comic evening. Performances are at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, Sept. 27-29 at the SRO Theater of the college, 980 Fremont Blvd., Monterey. Tickets are $3. Call 646-4213. J. Tenenbaum.

THEATER REVIEW

BY JEAN THURMAN

'Bookworm' well received

SUNSET THEATER saw the premiere performance of Keith McGregor's engaging play The Bookworm, winner of the Festival of Firsts 1984 Playwriting Competition. The comedy was well received by the opening night audience, and drew belly laughs and lively intermission discussion.

Martin Lakefield is the bookworm, portrayed by Jeff Hudelson. He is an isolationist who is intent on controlling his own life, and very pleased with how he's doing at the opening of the play. He owns a small used bookshop, ably run by his employee, Elaine, played by Sandy Williams.

He lives in the backroom behind his bookstore and has a routine to his life, which mostly involves reading, collecting books and writing his own book, Memoirs of a Recluse. He would be perfectly happy if everyone would only leave him alone, and even tells the audience to go away in one of his many asides to the house.

Life is not so kind, however, and his peaceful routine is interrupted by a young thug who breaks into his home to avoid the police. Martin, in the first of several blunders, shelters the boy from the police, then discovers, to his dismay, that he cannot get rid of him.

Al (Jon Warner Martin) moves in and threatens Martin with a knife and blackmail if he tries to kick him out. Elaine is completely won over by the young man, and the audience is not sure what to make of him.

On the one hand, he does seem to be a victim of circumstances, can be extremely charming, and seems to be honestly looking for work. On the other hand, he's always waving his knife around and taking advantage of Martin.

We can sympathize with Martin in his inability to rid himself of this scourge. Martin is a truly nice guy. His good nature always prevails over his good sense, and leads him into more and more serious blunders. His every instinct screams at him to shout "Hell, no!" when Elaine pleads with him to let the boy stay, but he ends up resignedly sighing, "Oh, all right."

In Act II life gives him another kick when the health inspector, a thoroughly nasty man who loves his work, informs him that he cannot live in the back room of his shop, and must relocate. The part is adroitly played by James Kinney, who brings to life all our worst fears about bureaucrats.

All turns out well, as Elaine solves the problem of Al in a no-holds-barred comic climax, and Al surprisingly solves the problem of the health inspector. Through his troubles, Martin has grown in his ability to cope with problems.

Jeff Hudelson and Sandy Williams as Martin and Elaine play extremely likeable characters who love their pastry and wine (not always together). Hudelson's character is a familiar one — the very well-educated person who scrapes by in a small business. He looks the part of a businessman, and communicates perfectly the frustration Martin feels in his inability to control his life.

Sandy Williams plays a highly efficient, warm, sensible Elaine. She is so competent at managing the shop and Martin that it is all the more comic to see her so completely taken by Al's vulnerable act.

JON MARTIN hits just the right balance for Al and keeps us as mystified as Martin about his true intentions. His stance, movements, and language all indicate a street tough, but he can instantly turn on a helpless expression that understandably makes Elaine's large heart melt.

Conrad Selvig's set has an authentic backroom look to it; cardboard boxes piled to the ceiling add a nice touch. Several characters comment on Martin's eccentricity as they look around the place though, and the look of the set is more poor than eccentric. The use of two levels adds interest to the look of the set. Unfortunately, the lower level is out of sight, and some of the most interesting action takes place on that level.

Peter DeBono has done a fine job directing this very funny and pleasant play, and at the same time preserving the author's commentary on life. As Martin says, reality is like a book that you are a character in and can't step out of, no matter how unpleasant it may become.

Unfortunately the play was scheduled for one weekend only, and closed Sept. 22. But this was a fine production and hopefully the playwright will see it produced many more times.

THEATER REVIEW

BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

'Medea,' 'Feiffer's People' merit critical praise

AT THE OUTDOOR Forest Theater, Robinson Jeffers' modern rendering of Euripides' Medea made a compelling debut, under the flawless direction of Nick Zanides.

And Monterey Peninsula College's SRO Theater offers a madcap change of pace — Feiffer's People: 20 vignettes, based on the cartoons of Jules Feiffer. Don't miss either one.

Although Jeffers' dialogue is fluidly modern, the mood and power of Euripides' ancient classic tragedy has been preserved in Medea. The ancient theatergoer went to the theater not to be amused but to undergo catharsis, to be purged of hidden emotions, baser feelings, confusing frustrations.

The term "purged" has been in recent times poorly understood. It is not to be read as "drained." A closer correspondence would be cleansed, and consequently, balanced. In the case of Medea, the audience witnesses an intense, powerful concentration of emotion running the gamut from lifelong passion to overwhelming lust for vengeance, from infinite tenderness to merciless butchery.

And the audience emerges, not drained, but clear. Having pushed the innermost buttons of the human heart, the play releases us to the street in a clear, clean place. And to the eternal credit of GroveMont Community Theatre, director Nick Zanides and actress Rosamond Goodrich, Medea succeeds not only as a riveting drama, but in creating that space within us.

In the title role, Goodrich physically resembles Dame Judith Anderson, for whom Jeffers wrote the part. Goodrich delicately probes the role for nuance and conveys hatred within pathos, tenderness within cruelty, greatness within vengeance. In perfect control of every aspect of a demanding performance, Goodrich's Medea emerges as a character who compels our attention.

WE KNOW Medea will ultimately murder her rival and slaughter her own children, yet we cannot take our eyes off her.

We want to understand her emotions and motivations. She towers in stature over her peers. She acts, unlike her estranged husband, not from personal gain, but from inner compulsion. Wronged beyond her limits, Medea retaliates with the full force of her heroic character. In short, she is an irresistible force. And Goodrich does justice, both to the character and to the musical power of Jeffers' dialogue. It is a virtuoso performance.

Supporting Goodrich are a well-rehearsed cast. Larry Welch's Creon is suitably pompous, well-meaning, and guilt-ridden — easy prey for Medea's dark wiles. Taft Miller's self-seeking Jason is appropriately weak at the center and no match for Medea's force of character.

In smaller but crucial roles, Carol Jean Wilson is superb as Medea's nurse, as is Jim Goffard as the tutor. Goffard is wonderful in his retelling of Medea's children's offstage visit to Creon's castle, and creates with tone of voice and animated gesture pictures in the audience's mind. Wilson likewise expertly conveys every person's emotional response to Medea's plight and to her grisly acts of vengeance.

The theater's stunning outdoor setting evokes the spirit of ancient Greek amphitheaters and lends a power of its own to the action onstage. Oronzo Abbatecola's set design takes full advantage of this, and the single setting, with its center backdrop of living trees and its borders of wood fires, is handsome and effective.

ROSAMOND GOODRICH portrays the title character in the GroveMont Community Theatre production of Medea, which continues this weekend in the Outdoor Forest Theater in Carmel. (Photograph by Susan Bock.)

Nick Zanides' name has become synonymous with sensitive, expert direction, and Medea is the latest in a string of perfect examples of his talent. Were this event three times its reasonable price ($6), it would remain a best buy for peninsula theatergoers. It is rare to see so much talent on any community theater stage, indoors or out.

MONTEREY Peninsula College offers a striking comic change of pace — 20 vignettes drawn from the comics of Jules Feiffer.

Against a colorful cartooned single setting, a cast of six, briskly directed by Carey Crockett, portray a variety of types in situations fraught with the ironies, frustrations, and mystifications of modern life.

Feiffer's work holds up a wry, ironic mirror to the cherished notions of almost all of us. The short pieces are drawn in swift, inciteful strokes.

Crockett's gang of six is attentively directed and well rehearsed, adept at quick costume and identity changes. Diana Crockett shines in roles which require perhaps the greatest range. She is seen (among many more roles) as a complacent matron, a gleefully irreverent empty-nester ("We never liked children," she confides in perfect grandmotherese), a neurotic seductress, and a five-year-old girl — earning, in this last guise, spontaneous applause from the audience.

It was well deserved, too, for she becomes a child, with all a child's vocal intonations and gestures of embarrassment, in a delightful explanation of her encounter with a bubble gum lady and its riotous results.

Likewise a standout is Roger Henderson's performance as Bernard, the most Feiffer-like character. Henderson's appearance is right for the role — he looks like a Feiffer cartoon — and he has just the right mixture of boyishness and maturity to convey the frustrations and confusions Feiffer grapples with — how to enjoy meaningless sex and how to survive the development of a relationship uppermost in mind.

In the person of Huey the playboy and a gaggle of American types, including game show host, political candidate, and gleeful warmonger, Arlen Sanders' exuberance, big voice, and vulnerable, hunted look add up to an expert, lively performance.

Christopher Jedi Thomas creates great fun with his portrayal of the man in the moon, a narrated tale ingeniously staged with Thomas atop the aforesaid orb. Thomas is likewise amusing as an indifferent sports hero and as (yes) Superman, for which his costume is a cartoon sprung to life.

All six performers work smoothly together, tossing out a great deal of food for thought along with the humor throughout the evening. Renée Maria Farjeon's expressive face and body inject a whimsical tone, as she combines dance and mime in several kinds-of-love interludes. Her proffered gift of several kinds of love, universally rejected, communicates especially well.

Lorraine M. Olsen's deadpan expression and delivery are comedy itself, and John Breyer and Denise Clifford contribute their fair share of competence and hilarity to this highly varied evening.

There were occasional slight time lags on lighting changes. Otherwise, the staging is well in hand, with minimal props suggesting the settings. The ambitious man-in-the-moon staging is a delightful exception. Otherwise, the burden is on the backdrop and the costumes, and both are effective. Costumes by Diana Crockett combine strong colors with neutrals in a way that holds the scenes together. Sound effects are inventively employed, a side-benefit from Carey Crockett's radio theater experience; these especially enhance the game show parody.

If Medea and Feiffer's People are any indication, peninsula theatergoers have a lot to look forward to in this new theater season. Feiffer's People continues at the SRO Theater of Monterey Peninsula College, with performances at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, this weekend only. Giant puppet theater presents 'The Hobbit'

J.R.R. Tolkien's fantastic tale The Hobbit will be acted out by four- to 12-foot tall rod puppets in a Sunday, Sept. 30, performance at Sunset Theater, San Carlos Street at Ninth Avenue, Carmel.

This production by Theatre Sans Fil (The No Strings Puppet Theatre) captured sell-out crowds during eight performances at the summer Olympic games in Los Angeles. Sunday's show will mark the company's only peninsula performance.

Manipulated in the Japanese Bunraku style by puppeteers clothed in black, the puppets assume a life and motion that is supra-human. The story follows the journey of Bilbo Baggins, an innocent who is drafted by the wizard Gandalf to help Thorin and his gang of dwarfs recover treasure stolen centuries earlier by an evil dragon.

During its travels, the gang encounters elves, spiders and goblins. The production makes use of stereophonic sound and character voices to heighten the action.

Theatre Sans Fil was founded in 1971. It was chosen to represent Canada at the World Puppetry Festival in Washington, D.C., in 1980. The Hobbit is designed for young people and adults. Theater management suggests it is not suitable for small children.

Curtain time is 8 p.m. Single tickets are priced at $7.75 and $8.75. For reservations, call Sunset Theater at 624-3996.

THEATRE SANS FIL, the No Strings Puppet Theatre, will stage J.R.R. Tolkien's The Hobbit using nine- to 12-foot tall rod pup-

Alcohol, aging is workshop focus

"Alcohol and the Aging" is the subject to be addressed Oct. 25 at the Monterey conference cosponsored by the Community Alcohol Center, a unit of the Community Human Services Project of Monterey, and Janus Alcoholism Services of Santa Cruz.

The conference has been organized for providers of health care, housing and services to the elderly. These workers are frequently the ones called upon to handle the deviations in behavior by the elderly that are brought about by alcohol abuse or a combination of alcohol use and prescribed or over-the-counter medications.

The problems are often misinterpreted as signs of senility or the aging process. As a result, many elderly people fail to receive the care and counsel they need to recover from the effects of chemical dependency.

The workshop fee is $35 for advance registration and $50 on the day of the workshop. Registration deadline is Oct. 8. Additional details may be obtained by calling 899-4131 in Monterey or 462-1060 in Santa Cruz.

First 'S.F.B. Morse Day' scheduled

THE MEMORY of the "Duke of Del Monte," Del Monte Forest developer Samuel F.B. Morse, will be paid tribute in Pebble Beach on Saturday, Sept. 29. The first S.F.B. Morse Day will feature entertainment, an art display and barbecue.

"We will celebrate Mr. Morse's memory and his contributions to the peninsula with a day-long festival of activities at Collins Polo Field," explained Richard Zahm, president of the Del Monte Forest Property Owners. "We want to sensitize people about the role Mr. Morse played in the development of the Forest's environment. And we want to engender a sense of community within the Forest."

S.F.B. Morse was the founder and chairman of the board of the Del Monte Properties Co., predecessor of the Pebble Beach Co. He was known as the "Duke of Del Monte" until his death May 10, 1969 at age 83. It was under Morse's guidance that the development of the Forest began, first with the opening of Del Monte Lodge (now The Lodge at Pebble Beach), and the Pebble Beach golf links. Before Morse's intervention, the golf links had been surveyed for home sites.

In the ensuing years, Morse envisioned and planned for the Cypress Point Club and Monterey Peninsula Country Club and their surrounding development. He sold the company's waterfront property in Pacific Grove for the nominal sum of $10,000 to the city of Pacific Grove on the condition that it be permanently retained as open space.

It was under Morse's direction, too, that the company donated land for the use of the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula and for Robert Louis Stevenson School — among other land donations.

Morse Day festivities begin at 11 a.m. and continue until 5 p.m. Music will be provided by The Diamonds, a bluegrass band, bagpipers and the Carmel Concert, a group which performs old English and folk ballads. Skits will be performed by the Frohman Academy of Carmel, RLS students and the B Sharp Follies.

Information booths will focus on the environment, the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, Boy Scouts of America, Pebble Beach Company's golf department and RLS. An art display will exhibit paintings by S.F.B. Morse. Pony and carriage rides will be available.

Barbecued hamburgers and hot dogs will be sold on the field, as will cotton candy, watermelon, caramel corn and soft drinks, wine and whiskey.

Admission is free to S.F.B. Morse Day. The usual $4 gate fee to Pebble Beach will be in effect.

DEL MONTE FOREST pioneer developer Samuel Finley Brown Morse will be paid tribute during the first S.F.B. Morse Day, scheduled Saturday, Sept. 29 at Collins Polo Field in Pebble Beach.

silver engraving, faceting, steam casting and gem cutting and polishing. Stones and tools for the hobbyist will be available for sale.

Displays will be open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. A $1.50 donation will be accepted at the entrance to the Monterey Room of the park, located at Fairgrounds and Garden roads, Monterey. For more information, call 375-1627.

WESTON GALLERY

Hand-colored images exhibited at Weston

AN EXHIBITION of hand-colored photographs and watercolors by Christopher James will be exhibited at The Weston Gallery in Carmel.

The show will open on Saturday, Sept. 29, with a champagne reception from 6 to 8 p.m. The exhibit will be on display in The Weston Gallery's main exhibition space through Nov. 11.

Christopher James has worked in both painting and photographic media for more than 15 years. He has served as instructor at Harvard for the past six years in visual and environmental studies, as well as leading workshops and lectures throughout the United States and Europe.

This exhibition will be the first mixed-media, one-person event at The Weston Gallery. It will feature both watercolors and hand-colored photographs of bathers, inspired by a recent journey to Budapest.

The photographic work of Christopher James is uniquely executed. Each black-and-white print is toned with sepia and/or selenium toner. The prints are then selectively painted with silver replacing mordant dyes.

In the final stages of the process, the prints are accented with buffed oil pencils and selectively painted with tinted and transparent lacquers and enamels, giving a textural quality to the images.

The mixed-media exhibition will be on display at The Weston Gallery through Nov. 11. The public is invited to attend the opening reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 29.

For further information, contact Maria Lindley, The Weston Gallery, Inc., on Sixth Avenue between Dolores and Lincoln, Carmel; or call 624-4453.

Lynn Murray has been weaving since 1972 and has created functional as well as decorative textiles. As a student at the University of California, Ms. Murray explored many fields of art including batik, weaving, drawing, sculpture and art history, always returning to textiles as her media for self-expression.

After she completed college, Ms. Murray began a serious study of weaving techniques during the early '70s. Her interest in fibers led her to develop a personal approach to handmade cloth, tapestries and clothing design.

The artist works with many different kinds of yarns, most of which she hand dyes. The fibers include wool, silk, mohair, alpaca, angora, rayon and cotton. These she blends to create new textures and colors to produce a pointillist effect. Due to yarn variation, each work is one-of-a-kind.

Ms. Murray's work has been featured in Fiberarts Design Book I and II, and the Buyer's Book of American Crafts. She has shown her work at the American Craft Enterprises shows in San Francisco, Dallas and Baltimore. For more information, call 624-5489.

AT REST/BUDAPEST 1984, a watercolor by Christopher James, will be shown at the Weston Gallery in Carmel. This is the first mixed-media show at the gallery, located on Sixth Avenue.

Animation course planned at Pacific Grove Art Center

Ms. Dean received a master's degree in fine arts, specifically in film, video and photography, from the University of California at San Diego. Students working on group and individual projects will explore various animation techniques from pixilation to clay animation, cartooning and much more.

An open screening of students' animation films is planned at the conclusion. This is a particularly accessible art form for children. The class meets from 9 to 10 a.m. Saturdays, Oct. 20 through Dec. 15. There is a tuition and supplies fee. For details, call the Pacific Grove Art Center, 375-2208.

CARMEL primitive painter Bill W. Dodge will execute a commemorative painting for Nestle Enterprises, Inc., of Toronto, Canada, according to company president Ian W. Murray. (John Livingstone photograph).

Carmel artist wins corporate commission

HIGHLIGHTING its 100th anniversary in 1986, Nestle Enterprises, Inc., of Toronto, Canada, has commissioned Carmel painter Bill W. Dodge to execute a commemorative painting of the corporation's association in Canada.

Dodge will tour Ontario, Quebec, and other provinces next month to research his preliminary sketch. It will be presented in February 1985. Actual painting will begin the following July and will take approximately six months.

The 36-by-48-inch painting will be unveiled at anniversary ceremonies and eventually will hang in the board room of Nestle's North American headquarters in Toronto. Limited edition serigraphs will be made from the original.

A painter of primitive art, Dodge previously rendered a painting that depicts the history of the Hawaiian-based AMFAC Corporation. Among his other corporate projects is his creation of the Americana Collection of Libby, McNeill and Libby, a group of turn-of-the-century rural scenes, housed at the firm's Chicago headquarters.

He has also had commissions from Arrow Truck Co. and the Dennison Paper Co. A self-styled recorder of history, Dodge shows his works at the Bill W. Dodge Gallery, Dolores Street near Fifth Avenue, Carmel. The gallery also exhibits works by local and international primitive, naive and folk painters.

"I love horses and roses, but no more than any other animals or flowers. That is one of the reasons the mezzotint technique is so important to me. As I rework, rock and burnish the plate, I don't see the subject. The actual experience of the technique of "layering," inherent in mezzotint, becomes my subject."

LA TURBALLE, a watercolor by California-born artist Robert Moesle, who now resides in France, can be viewed at Village Artistry in Carmel. Receptions are scheduled from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 29-30, at the gallery.

Village Artistry shows watercolors of France

THE VILLAGE Artistry gallery of Carmel will feature an exhibit of watercolors of the French coast by native Californian Robert Moesle.

Born in San Jose, the artist attended schools there and received a B.A. in art from San Jose State University. He studied for two more years at the Ruskin School of Art at Oxford University in England.

Now residing in France with his French wife and their two children in an 18th-Century farmhouse, Moesle said he is very much at home in his adopted country. Finding its beauty and tranquility necessities for the completion of his extremely detailed watercolors, he returns to the United States every year for an annual one-man show at Village Artistry.

Known for his paintings of French chateaux, many of which are within minutes of his home, he has also traveled to and painted other regions of France, such as Burgundy and Provence. He has not limited himself to the beauty of France since in some of his past shows he has portrayed Italy, Yugoslavia and England.

This year his painting travels took Moesle to the Atlantic coast of France where he was able to capture the beauty of the sea and the charm of the fishing villages in such places as Normandy and Brittany.

The exhibition will open with a public reception honoring Robert Moesle from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 29-30. The show will continue through Oct. 13 at Village Artistry, located on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, Carmel. For more information, call 624-3448.

New Pacific Grove gallery exhibits Joan Savo's work

A NEW ART gallery will be inaugurated Saturday, Sept. 29, when the Joan Savo exhibition opens at Site 311.

A reception for the artist is planned from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday at the contemporary fine arts gallery, 311 Forest Ave., Pacific Grove. The exhibit will remain up through Nov. 1.

Ms. Savo has been an acknowledged figurative artist on the West Coast since the 1960s. Her work has been featured in major exhibitions and the permanent collections of several California museums, including the California Palace of the Legion of Honor, Fresno Arts Center, Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art and the San Francisco Museum of Art.

A Pacific Grove resident, Ms. Savo turned to color field painting in the late '70s but has resumed her long-standing interest in the figure with this body of work. Those familiar with Ms. Savo's oils will find the same coloration and technical ability for which she has become known. What is different is her treatment of the figure.

Her earlier works read as portraits and convey moods of tranquility, curiosity, independence and isolation. The recent images are more abstract and more symbolic.

The gallery is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays. For more information, call Adrienne Harkins, 373-8555.

MAN WITH PALM, a recent figurative painting by Joan Savo, is part of the inaugural exhibition of the new Site 311 gallery in Pacific Grove. The public is invited to the opening reception from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 29.

SKYLINE FOREST. This home high above the city of Monterey features 3 bedrooms, den, 3 baths, double garage and can also be arranged for two-level living. English, Russian films screened
